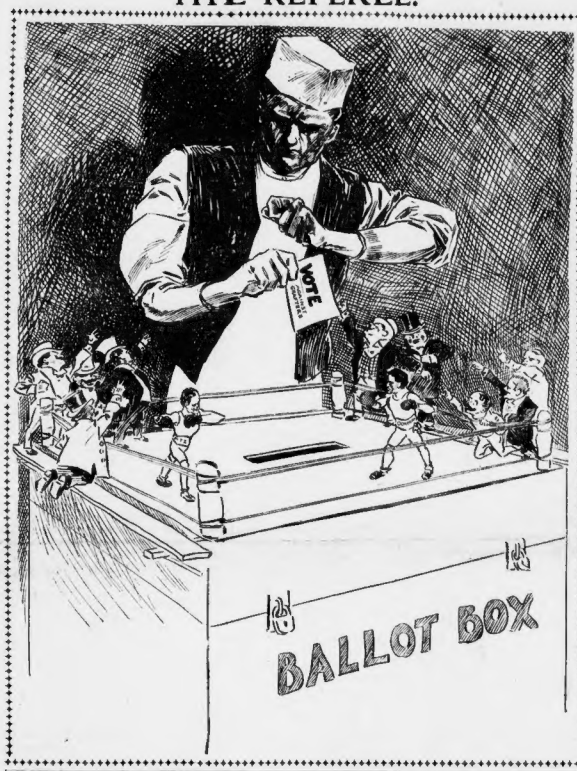
1,300 POLICEMEN AT PRIMARIES TO GUARD POLLS

THE REFEREE.



PUNISH THE "L" ROAD!

Vote Against Its Gang of Contractors and Show What You Think of Its Sweatshop Methods

The Boston Elevated Railway announces that women are to replace men as ticket sellers in its stations.

It can hire girls for about half the cost of men, and so it proposes to throw the men out.

The Boston Elevated Railway controls the ring of public service contractors who are opposing E. J. Donovan for Mayor. Three of these contractors are regularly employed by the Boston Elevated and assist that corporation in keeping its dividends down within the legal limit.

E. J. Donovan, whom they are fighting, has declared for municipal ownership and for forcing the public service corporations to give the city a square deal.

Every workingman and every student o fpublic affairs knows that under municipal ownership the sweatshop methods which the Boston Elevated has adopted would be impossible.

Every Democratic member of a labor union, and every Democrat who believes in fair play, will have an opportunity to-morrow to teach the Boston Elevated Railway a lesson.

VOTE AGAINST THE GRAFTERS!

Vote for E. J. Donovan and municipal ownership.

Extraordinary Precautions Will Be Taken to Prevent Repeating and Other Frauds in the Nominations To-morrow—Campaign of Unexampled Bitterness Leads to Fears of Trouble.

Unprecedented precautions are being taken by the police authorities of the city to insure a free and fair ballot and an honest count at to-morrow's primary election, when the voters of Boston will select their candidates for the chief offices of the city government.

The police are determined that the wishes of the citizens shall not be frustrated by repeaters and that brutality and coercion shall not effect the result if vigilance can prevent it.

Twelve notorious leaders of election repeaters were to-day warned by the police to leave the city. If they are found in Boston after receiving the notice or are found in any ward to-morrow they will be arrested promptly.

Every bluecoat of the Hub will be on duty to-morrow, most of them assigned to election work. Added to the 1,250 men in this city will be a large detail from adjacent cities, making the force more than 1,300 men.

Following a campaign that for bitterness has never been equalled in this city, it is feared that the acuteness of the situation may result in personal encounters to the detriment of fair results. The police will keep a special watch to prevent any disorder and will not hesitate to make arrests.

TO SAFEGUARD THE BALLOT.

Election Commissioners Minton and Shaw to-day made this statement:

"We have taken every precaution to guard against irregularities in the city primaries.

"We will have the co-operation of the Board of Police, and there will be one member of the board in every ward identified with the primaries.

"The purity of the ballot box will be better safeguarded than ever before and as well as it is possible to do."

Captain Dugan called the entire force of police inspectors before him early to-day and read them the list of the twelve men named as leaders of gangs of repeaters. Captain Dugan told his detectives to find them all and to notify them to get out of town. The police inspectors immediately left headquarters on their mission of safeguarding the purity of the ballot.

This action caused consternation among the foes of good government. It is said that a desperate effort has been planned to thwart the will of the people by wholesale repeating. Captain Dugan is in charge of the work of keeping thugs who vote "early and often" away from the polls.

ON DUTY AT THE POLLS.

The names of the captains of the bands of repeaters are in the hands of the police board, and it is known that if arrested they will get no mercy from John H. Mecan, District Attorney-elect.

To-morrow will be the first time in the history of Boston when every clerk, inspector and other attache of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation will be assigned to duty at the polls. There will be a swarm of plain clothes workmen at work. Every patrolman on day or night duty will also be assigned to primary duty. They will be shifted from home wards and given posts where they are strangers. Besides Boston policemen there will be sixty-two officers from adjoining municipalities at the polls.

These men will come from Cambridge, Somerville, Chelsea, Revere and Quincy, and will be selected for the work because of their knowledge of the men of their cities and towns who might engage in any illegal practice.

They will be stationed in the wards nearest to the cities whence they come, and in consequence will have a knowledge not possessed by the members of the Boston department on duty at the polling booths.

Candidates Requested Police.

This request for additional officers was made to Chairman Cole of the Board of Police by Martin M. Lomasney, representing Edward J. Donovan, and Henry S. Fitzgerald, for his brother, John F. Fitzgerald. No requests for additional officers were made by any of the Republican candidates nor their supporters.

It was also hinted to the Board the possibility of collusion between the officers on duty and the precinct election officials. To ward off this Chairman Cole says that the details to the various polling places will be arranged as to cover this contingency.

This will be effected by sending one man at least to a booth who knows the voters, but the other officers sent there will not be known generally, and his presence, it is believed, will ward off any collusion there might possibly be.

It is planned to cover all approaches to the city from early morning and all questionable visitors to the city will undoubtedly have to give the police a pretty clear account of themselves and the purpose of their visit before they are allowed to enter the city.

These outside officers will have the same authority as the local police statute law giving them that power. They will be in citizens' clothes and will keep a sharp watch for suspects from the opening until the closing of the polls.

Troops Mutiny, Mob Sacks and Slaughters,

VLADIVOSTOK ABLAZE

Pacific Stronghold Doomed by Revolutionary Crisis; 300 Dead and Wounded.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 15.—A telegram, which has just been received from Vladivostok, says that the whole town and the port are ablaze. The greater part of the town has been consumed.

The situation to-day is desperate. The mobs are in practical control of the town, and the looting which has marked the progress of the outbreak continues unabated. The rioters likewise continue to fire buildings, and the flames are spreading rapidly. To make the situation worse, the food supply is growing short and famine threatens the city.

300 DEAD AND WOUNDED.

During the first day of the rioting 300 rioters, mostly sailors and artillerymen, were killed or wounded. As yet, however, individual citizens have not been molested.

The riot was started by malcontent reservists. They started the trouble by looting a bazar. The irresolution of the authorities, who failed to take vigorous measures to put an end to the outbreak, was responsible for the spread of the disorder. Seeing they were not interfered with in their first attack, the rioters broke into other shops. All the business houses in the commercial section were entered and plundered. The rioters soon became drunk, and then resorted to all forms of violence, apparently being inspired by but one motive, to do all the damage that lay within their power.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 15.—A state of war has been declared in Vladivostok. Private advices say that the Chinese quarter has been entirely destroyed.

GARRISON IN MUTINY.

In spite of the almost complete embargo placed on all telegrams from Vladivostok, it is known that a serious outbreak has taken place in the eastern fortress. One report circulated on the Bourse to-day had the entire garrison and the sailors of all the ships in the harbor in a mutiny. This, following on the heels of the mutiny at Cronstadt, contributed to the utter demoralization on the exchange.

Fears are expressed in admiralty and general staff quarters that mob violence has flared out again and that this will necessitate a further resort to armed force.

FLEETS TO ENFORCE ULTIMATUM TO TURKEY

POWERS WARN SULTAN THAT MACEDONIAN REFORMS MUST BE MADE.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—An ultimatum demanding immediate enforcement of the financial reforms in Macedonia, decreed by the powers, has been sent to the Sultan of Turkey and the international fleet is expected to concentrate at Piraeus about November 22.

WORKMEN START STRIKE TO-DAY; NOW AIM AT REPUBLIC

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 15.—The proletariat of St. Petersburg has summoned another general political strike, beginning to-day at noon.

This action was decided upon late last night by the workmens' strike committee, which now is completely under the domination of the Social Revolutionists, whose leaders openly proclaim that their ultimate object is the complete overthrow of the monarchy and the establishment of a democratic republic.

This also is the real aim of their brethren, the Social Democrats of Poland, but the proclamation issued keeps this in the background and apparently supports the popular sympathy for Polish autonomy and the indignation against the application of the death sentence being imposed on the Cronstadt mutineers. The proclamation says in part:

"The workmen's council calls on the revolutionary proletariat of St. Petersburg to renew the general political strike, which has already demonstrated its dread power, in order to show brotherly solidarity with the revolutionary soldiers and sailors, as well as with the revolutionary proletariat of Poland. Let the workmen of St. Petersburg cease work at noon, November 15, with the cries of 'Down with the court-martial!' 'Down with the death penalty!' 'Down with martial law in Poland and in all Russia!'"

The committee has appealed to the strike committees throughout Russia to join in the movement, and has also appealed to the railroad men with the view of bringing about another general tieup.

TAMMANY DESPERATE, FIGHTS THE RECOUNT

MURPHY'S LAWYERS ARE BATTLING AGAINST HEARST'S TALLY SHEET ORDER.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Charles F. Murphy's lawyers were lined up to-day in New York and Queens counties in a determined effort to prevent a thorough and accurate count of the votes cast for the office of Mayor last Tuesday. The battle began to-day in earnest.

Murphy, as the head and front of Tammany Hall, is striving to let the result stand as it appears on the face of the returns.

The lawyers for William Randolph Hearst, knowing of vast discrepancies, insist now on getting the original tally sheets of the poll clerks in each election district before the boards of canvassers, an extraordinary proceeding which is expected to reveal the "discrepancies."

The canvass in New York and Queens Counties was, therefore, delayed to-day, pending the action of the Supreme Court on the orders obtained by Attorneys for the Municipal Ownership League, compelling County Clerk Hamilton of New York and County Clerk Van Nostrand of Queens to produce the original tally sheets for use in the canvass.

Murphy to Fight.

These writs were obtained by counsel for the Municipal Ownership League and William Randolph Hearst from Justice Amend in Manhattan and Justice Dickey in Brooklyn. Murphy's lawyers at once made plans to fight the move, and Corporation Counsel Delany was on hand to appear for Mr. Hamilton before Justice Addons, at 11 o'clock to-day, when the order was made returnable in Manhattan.

Ex-Surrogate Daniel Noble represented County Clerk Van Nostrand in Queens county. The order was served on the latter official at 10 o'clock to-day. Noble, under instructions from Cassidy, the "Boss" of Queens was prepared to resist the order and compel the canvassers to use the returns of Inspectors instead of the original tally sheets.

Hope to Have Boxes Opened.

With the original tally sheets before the boards it is believed that such "variations" will be discovered that the courts will find it necessary to open the ballot boxes in the disputed districts.

Harrison F. Moore, also counsel for Murphy, examined the order of Justice Dickey with great care, seeking to find a loophole in it. It was announced that the board was uncertain whether to oppose the order although it wanted to. All depended on the decision of the Murphy lawyers.

On motion of Alderman Harburger, the New York Board of County Canvassers adjourned immediately upon being called to order this morning until noon to-day so that the order issued by Judge Amend last night could be argued and disposed of by Justice Addons.

THOW BOMB AT SULTAN'S AIDE

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 15.—An attempt has been made on the life of Pehim Pacha, the well-known aide-de-camp to the Sultan. He was driving through a street of Pera, a suburb of this city, when a bomb was hurled at the carriage. Pacha escaped injury, but windows in shops and houses in the neighborhood were demolished.

HOT FINISH TO CAMPAIGN FOR MAYORALTY NOMINATIONS

TALK AND RED FIRE GALORE IN CITY TO-NIGHT

Fitzgerald to Tour City, Donovan Has Six Speeches and Dewey Has Several.

JOINT DEBATE IS ALL OFF

The whirlwind campaign for the mayoralty nominations in Boston comes to a close to-night. All the candidates are booked for speeches to-day.

The record number of twenty-five different speeches, one for every ward in the city, is announced for Ex-Congressman John F. Fitzgerald. He will tour the city in an auto, beginning at 7 o'clock and winding up about midnight.

Edward J. Donovan, Mr. Fitzgerald's rival for the Democratic nomination, will speak in Wards 2, 5, 16, 19, 20 and 25, and in Faneuil Hall.

Judge Dewey is advertised to speak this noon in the Prince School, Exeter street.

Martin Lomasney announced at a rally that he will lead a torchlight procession of Ward 8 voters into the Fitzgerald headquarters, Ward 6, to-night, accompanied by a band.

Joint Debate Plans Fall.

The rallies, as announced so far, will bring the oratory part of the campaign at least to a close, but active caucus work is expected to go on right up to the closing of the polls to-morrow, so heated is the rivalry for caucus honors.

The most interesting development of the past twenty-four hours in the minds of the voters seemed to be the failure of the Fitzgerald-Donovan joint debate plans. Congressmen Keliher and McNary, representing Mr. Donovan, met Lawyer Coakley and Senator-elect Lagnia at Young's Hotel to confer about the proposed debate. There was much verbal sparring, but neither side would accept the terms of the other.

Mr. Donovan's representatives said he would debate, but demanded that the subjects should be the record, character and fitness of each candidate. Mr. Fitzgerald's representatives said he would debate, but demanded that the subject be confined to the legislative records of both candidates. On this deadlock the conference was unable to proceed and the debate is abandoned.

Later, speaking in Ward 8, Mr. Donovan said:

"I had declared that my opponent's challenge was not made in good faith. I repeat and charge, him with attempting to deceive the public into the belief that he really desired to debate with me, while as a matter of fact, he trembled at the prospect of a meeting."

Fitzgerald Scores McNary.

On the other hand, Mr. Fitzgerald said on last night's strump:

"I recognize that as a candidate for high public office, I am to be judged by my past record of public service no less than by the charges that his record is bad, but I equally insist that my record is good."

Speaking of Congressman McNary, Mr. Fitzgerald says this feeling tribute:

"He (McNary) would like to drag me down to his level, but I prefer to walk upon the plane of statesmanship and decency, while he descends into the gutter of personalities and calumny."

Speaking in Ward 15 about the same time, Congressman McNary devoted most of his time to Mr. Fitzgerald. Here is one excerpt from the speech:

"I have shown to the people of Boston that Mr. Fitzgerald is not a man to be considered for the nomination as Mayor of Boston."

The three Republican candidates, Dewey, Callender and Frothingham, spoke in different parts of the city. All three also spoke at the smoke talk in Copley Square Hotel. Judge Dewey opened in the East Concord street schoolhouse, where he said among other things:

"There are a lot of leading citizens who would like to be running my campaign for me, but I am doing my own thinking, and I want you to do the same." The Judge then went to Copley Square Hotel and spoke a few words for Malcolm Nichols, candidate for the Common Council. Then he went to Schwartz Hall, North End, and to South Boston.

Callender Against Goo-Goos.

Senator Callender spoke in South Boston, Copley Square Hotel and Westminster Chambers. In South Boston he said he does not believe in the Good Government Association. He was the last candidate speaker at Copley Square Hotel, the crowd waiting over to hear him. A sensational incident came when Senator Callender accused Mayor Curtis and Charles H. Innes, both of whom were present, of being in the deal with Frothingham and Martin Lomasney to present the redistricting of Boston.

"Lomasney is a man without vices, but I certainly disagree with him politically."

Echoes from the Stump in Final Days of Campaign

EDWARD J. DONOVAN: "My opponent did not challenge me to debate in good faith. After my acceptance, his refusal proves that he was trying to deceive the the people. He quit."

JOHN F. FITZGERALD: "I charge that my opponent's record is bad, but I equally insist that my record is good."

WILLIAM S. McNARY: "I have shown to the people that Mr. Fitzgerald is not a man fit to be considered for the nomination for Mayor of this city.

JUDGE HENRY S. DEWEY: "No leading citizens are managing my campaign. I am guided by my own opinions. Let the voters be guided by theirs."

EDWARD B. CALLENDER: "Did you or did you not, Mr. Frothingham conspire against the proposed redistricting of the city with Mr. Lomasney and Mr. Curtis?"

LOUIS A. FROTHINGHAM: "I want to say that I don't feel like a martyr. I have always tried to be independent, and I am."

WOMEN TICKET AGENTS IN THE 'L' STATIONS

Will Work Days, Except Sundays, and Company Will Save Money.

The Boston Elevated is to have "she" ticket sellers.

Beginning next Monday morning the uniformed men who sell tickets at the Elevated and subway stations will be replaced by demure young women.

It is said that the Elevated will effect quite a saving in its operating expenses through employing women instead of men in the ticket offices. The men ticket sellers now receive $2.25 a day. The women will be paid, it is understood, about $9 or $10 a week. They will only work day times, and work days at that. Nights and Sundays the men will be on deck. But several men ticket sellers will be out of a job at that, as it will require about eight men to run the jobs nights and Sundays instead of the larger force required hitherto. The men who will be replaced by women have received notice that they will not be required after this week.

The change will be of particular interest in the Park street subway station, South Station station and other busy places in the rush hours. Then a lot of tired and impatient humanity streams into the subway and up to the "I" demanding tickets in a hurry, crowding up to the windows five and six deep, and generally anxious to get tickets and change and get them quick.

Any tendency to vigorous language on the part of the fretted Boston man when unable to get his ticket "right off" will have to be suppressed now, out of courtesy to the feminine ticket seller.

There's one thing that won't be allowed, anyway, by the public, even if the company doesn't prevent it. No ordering "chawlee" or "Johnnie" will be allowed on hold up a long line of wrathy ticket buyers while he indulges in light and airy persiflage with the "lady ticket seller."

CAMBRIDGE GIRL TO WED JAP CHEMIST

Orichi Murata, a nephew of a former prime minister of Japan, Count Koroda, and Miss Mabel L. Moore, of No. 207 Lake View avenue, Cambridge, will be married Thursday, in Cambridge.

Murata attended the Harvard Manual School and is at present an analytical chemist. He is known through his connection with the Massachusetts Lodge, A. F. & A. M., being the third Japanese to be elevated to the rank of Master Mason. He is at present in the employ of Samuel Neill, a manufacturing chemist of Boston.

THOUSANDS HEED CRY FOR AID OF JEWS

Boston Fund Is Nearly $10,000 and More Will Be Raised at Mass Meetings.

The fund for the relief of Jews who are being persecuted in Russia is growing. From all parts of New England checks are coming to Kidder, Peabody & Co., the bankers, who have consented to receive contributions. The total to date of the subscriptions received by this house for the cause of humanity in the Czar's realm is $5,190.

Other contributions have swelled the relief fund to nearly $10,000. It is desired to raise $50,000. Every cent of the money contributed will alleviate misery and succor a worthy and industrious people who have been subjected to tortures and ajuse which have shocked the civilized world. No worse persecutions were inflicted in the Dark Ages.

What the Jews are suffering in Russia and what can be done to aid them will be told at two mass meetings to be held in Boston. At Faneuil Hall on Saturday night, and in the Temple Ohabei Shalom, on Union Park street, on Monday night, prominent Hebrews will make an appeal to the charitable of all races and creeds.

National Cordage— American Woolen

I am not given to the game of boasting or the blowing of my own horn, and yet I will say and say it strongly and with all the emphasis at my command, that "King's Financial Bulletin" for November 15th, which will be put to press today, and of which nearly fifty thousand copies will be printed, will be worth more money to investors than any eight-page newspaper or other publication ever turned from a printing press.

I believe the leading article dealing with the National Cordage and the American Woolen Company—the deadly parallel made—will prove to be worth thousands upon thousands of dollars to investors generally throughout the country.

In this article I draw the curtain of the past and invite investors to look upon the decaying glory of the once powerful Cordage Trust. I show clearly how dividends of 8% were paid on the preferred stock and 12% on the common stock until the common commanded $150 per share and the preferred was thought too holy to be handled by ordinary hands.

All of this is called to mind by the halo which stock manipulators during the past few months have placed around the common shares of the American Woolen Company, the manipulation possessing, as it does, a striking resemblance to the halcyon and vociferous days of the Cordage Trust.

It is also called to mind on account of the fact that only a few days ago the shares of the Standard Rope & Twine Company, which corporation succeeded the Cordage Trust, has been stricken from the list of securities which may be gambled in on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange. It is called to mind by the fact that the price of this company's income bonds has declined to three cents on the dollar and the stock, therefore, today carries about the same value as a cancelled postage stamp.

The history of National Cordage and the manipulation of the common stock of the American Woolen Company during the past few months offers a striking example of the desperate measures sometimes resorted to in the stock market. It is a sad illustration of a corporation well-managed and with great earning capacity permitting its stock to be battledored and shuttlecocked on the floor of our stock exchanges to the injury of legitimate business and its own reputation.

"King's Financial Bulletin" is a journal for investors—a newspaper for honest investors. It preaches the gospel of a square deal to everyone. It is opposed to speculation because speculation is the jade that kills—because to speculate is irrational —because it is insensate—because it bites—because it stings—because it burns—because it poisons—because it destroys soul and body—because it is like the worm that dieth not and the fire that is not quenched—because it threatens the whole future of business and finance—threatens it at all times with grave disaster—threatens the pillars of church and state.

The South may pour her cotton and tobacco and the West her grain and fruit into the cornucopias and burst in and out the doors and doors of granaries and warehouses.

The days of famine, panic and drought may disappear as a horrible dream that was, and the money of the East may roll like a tide southward and westward to move the great crops——

And yet——

The craze for speculation may throttle commerce and finance in a land overflowing with plenty.

The time is at hand when the American people must realize and be aroused to the folly—the danger and the evil—of speculation and flee from it as from pestilence and plague.

If you are an investor—if you own stocks or bonds of any corporation—if you have as much as $100 deposited in a bank or trust company—if you are interested in the welfare of your country—you should read carefully every issue of "King's Financial Bulletin." It will help you—it will prove of value to you—it will coin golden dollars for you.

Write for it today. It is free for the asking. Address, C. F. KING, Journal Building, Boston, Mass.

Edward James Donovan, one of the Democratic candidates for the Mayoralty nomination, is a Bostonian. He was born in the West End forty-one years ago. He is the eldest of six children, four boys and two girls, all living.

The father of the candidate was a cigar maker. He was born in Ireland. Edward went to the Phillips School and then to the English High School. His father died after he had been in high school for about a year, and then he had to go to work to help his mother.

Some of Mr. Donovan's characteristics as a man cropped out when he was a school boy. He was determined and pugnacious; not going about looking for trouble, but ready to take his part when he thought his rights were invaded.

And he had a ready tongue in argument and was full of resources in a verbal tilt with his chums. He had a good memory for declamations and he was regarded as about the best speaker of pieces in the school. He liked athletics, but had to go to work before he had much of a chance as a schoolboy at this.

Mr. Donovan is a splendid penman and his first work was as a bookkeeper. His first positions were with millinery firms on Summer street. He was twenty-two years of age when he went to work for the firm of Brown & Durrell.

Politics early attracted the young man. His first venture as a candidate was in 1887. He ran as an independent candidate for the House in Ward 6. He made a hustling campaign and was elected.

At that time he was the youngest man who had ever been elected to that body. He became quite a figure in politics in his ward and when the Hendricks Club—now a famous organization—was organized, he became the first president.

From House to Senate.

The Democrats, who had been divided in Ward 8, got together in 1888, and they took up young Mr. Donovan as their candidate for the House, and he was returned to that body. Then Mr. Donovan ran for the Senate and was elected to serve three two terms.

Mr. Donovan took one shy at the newspaper business. He and Thomas Keenan published for a few years the Boston Democrat. It was a Sunday weekly. He quit in 1891. The next year Mayor Matthews appointed him health commissioner.

Two years after that Grover Cleveland was elected President. Mr. Donovan was appointed internal revenue collector. Then he began to show the timber that he is made of as an executive and as a party man. He stood by the Democrats—Republicans—and put in good Democrats.

This raised some ructions for a time, but when it was seen that he had raised that standard of the department there were expressions of satisfaction. When Mr. McKinley was elected the first time Mr. Donovan got out before he was asked. His successor praised the conditions which he found in the office when he took hold.

But they wanted him to represent them in Ward 8 in the House again, and he did so in 1888 and 1889. He became city clerk in 1900. He holds the position to-day. His salary is $5,000. He has an interest in a real estate business on Tremont street.

Mr. Donovan is a domestic man. He was married to Miss Marjorie Moultrey of the West End in 1891. Bishop O'Connell performed the ceremony. After his marriage he moved to Allston. He now lives at Brighton, where he moved with his family a few years ago.

Has Domestic Tastes.

Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Donovan, two boys and two girls. They are Frances, thirteen; Grace, eight; Lawrence, six and Edward James Donovan, Jr., the baby, a little more than a year old.

A reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN asked Mr. Donovan for a group picture of his family. This is what he said:

"No, I can't give it to you. I don't believe in campaigning that way. I am the only one in the family running for office. I propose to guard the privacy of my home in this campaign."

Mr. Donovan stays at home of nights, too, except on special occasions. Sometimes he is at the Hendricks Club. Sometimes he is at a lodge meeting—a real lodge meeting—for he belongs to a number of organizations.

Very fond of reading, Mr. Donovan has a large library. He likes good things, ordinances, city government and such things. A ready talker, a brilliant debater and an eloquent speaker, he knows how to hold his tongue, too. He doesn't like to talk about himself, but will not talk about his family.

Possessing a very strong and almost stern personality, Mr. Donovan is genial and hospitable. When a reporter reached him at his private headquarters this dialogue ensued at the conversation.

Mr. Donovan: "Have a seat."

Reporter: "Thank you."

Mr. Donovan: "Have a smoke."

Reporter: "No, thank you."

Mr. Donovan: "Have a drink."

Reporter: "No, thank you."

Mr. Donovan: "Well, I haven't had a drink myself in many years."

Donovan smokes but he does not drink at all. In that he resembles Richard Croker, the former Tammany leader in New York.

Makes Position Clear.

As to where Mr. Donovan stands on the questions that are being discussed in the present, he is making clear on the platform and in the newspapers. One of his first utterances was:

"I am no man's man. If elected I will not be controlled by any man or set of men. I know the way clearly, I hope, and I shall follow it."

And those who have seen "Eddie" Donovan's eyes flash and his jaw set when he makes a statement of that character are pretty sure to be convinced that he means it.

P. S.—Explanation by reporter—In this story I said Mr. and Mrs. Donovan had four children. It was written yesterday. They have five to-day—two girls and three boys.

LUCKY HORSES KISSED BY MRS. VANDERBILT

They Were Most Envied of All at New York Show, Though not Getting Ribbons.

E. D. JORDAN WINS PRIZES

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Horse Show horse is again crowned king in a new way. He has been kissed, and by no less important a personage than Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt. This delightful accolade, for which many a nobleman of "ye ancient days" would have braved a far more difficult and dangerous trial than that of a horse show ring, was impulsively bestowed by Mrs. Vanderbilt on two sirs-legals of the stable, a pair of bays which her husband entered for class 52, for pairs of mates or geldings to be shown before a victoria. This kiss, as it happened, was all the favor the Vanderbilt bays won, the judges giving the prizes elsewhere.

The Vanderbilt bays were waiting near the fourth avenue entrance to the Madison Square Garden. Mrs. Vanderbilt came up, escorted by Monson Morris. In the sight of hundreds of interested bystanders Mrs. Vanderbilt walked up to the high-bred beasts and pressed her rosy lips on the silken nose of each horse. It was all done in a flash—just a little inclination of the proud Vanderbilt head, the dainty caress, and Mrs. Vanderbilt swept on, amid the murmur of approving comment. One man was heard to say:

The Kiss Was All They Got.

"Lucky brutes."

It was not an omen of luck for the horses, however, when they came to the judging, for the blue ribbon went to J. F. Carlisle's Eloquence and Reverie, James Hobart Moore's Lord Roberts and Harold II. took second. Lady Eocene and Lady Barbara, from the Dosaris Park stables, were third, and even the highly commended went to William H. Moore's Dan and Fife. The poor Vanderbilt bays had to be content with the kiss they had received from their fair mistress.

The Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt stables did better, however, in other events, where the horses were—to all accounts, as an-kissed as Gladstone Bowle. In the afternoon Vanderbilt's four in hand park team took the blue, later taking the blue in the private omnibus team.

The horses of Eben D. Jordan, whose Plymouth hackney stud at Forge Farm, Plymouth hackney stud at Forge Farm, Plymouth Mass., has won a fame that is now worldwide, have already won a lot of blue ribbons at the horse show and promise to repeat their success of last year, carrying away for him the greatest number of blue ribbons of any exhibitor.

As on the opening day, Mr. Jordan was one of the first blue ribbon winners. His Gents and Xania took first and second in the first class of yearling fillies and also the blue and red ribbons in the class of hackneys two-year-old fillies. Mr. Jordan's winner in this latter class was Arcadia, and repeated the blue ribbon in the yearling class. Merry Chilton took the red. The hackneys, mares, four years old and over class, he was awarded the third prize for Merry Cyonne.

Flashlight Wins Cup.

Mr. Jordan's Flashlight won the Ablic challenge cup for hackney or half-bred hackney mare or gelding, fifteen hands or over, bred in America; and Lord Burleigh and Lord Belfast won third prize for pairs shown before a brougham.

The qualified hunters of the Corinthian class were a feature, and Miss Belle Beach, one of the best cross country riders this side of the Atlantic, was the principal figure in an exciting incident.

In charging the jumps on Mrs. Thomas P. Lindsay's Chapple Leo, the saddle girth slipped. In an instant Miss Beach was over on the side of the swaying brute, clinging to the mane with one hand and to the horn with the other.

Not a word nor an outcry came from her lips as the horse bolted and ran into the fence. The plucky young woman kept her seat while the attendants rushed to the rescue.

Somebody brought a new saddle, and when it was properly clinched Miss Beach put the horse at the jumps again.

CLERKS ROB ON ROOSEVELT'S MUTUAL PLAN TEETH TREATED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—President Roosevelt's famous teeth are beginning to show signs of having passed their prime. So seriously have they been affected that the President recently had a number of serious consultations with his dentist, and he has spent much time in the chair while the surgeon has probed, hammered, brushed and investigated.

President Roosevelt's teeth are known from Sandy Hook all the way westward until Sandy Hook is reached again. There is no set of teeth better known in the world, and everyone who has talked with the President recalls as one of the vivid recollections of the interview the glittering, glistening, white and powerful looking grinders that give his face one of its strongest characteristics.

The first arrest in what seems to be a series of larcenies from business men was made when William H. Chickering, colored, of Buckingham street, was locked on a charge of stealing $90.50 worth of property from Elmer E. Chickering, photographer, at No. 21 West street, where Gas was janitor.

In the janitor's apartments were found picture frames, pictures and other articles to the value of $200, which Mr. Chickering identified as his property. Mr. Chickering said the property stolen from his place in the last few months will amount to over $1,000.

Many business men on West street have missed articles. It is said clerks in a few stores on this street have been doing a brisk, quiet swapping business for many months.

Shall Boston retrograde when New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and other great cities of the country have achieved notable municipal reform victories?

CANDIDATES IN LINE FOR MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

Letters to League Show Recognition of Importance of Right Stand on This Question Before the People.

That there is a very strong and insistent feeling in Boston and many other Massachusetts cities and towns for the municipal ownership of public utilities and especially of the lighting plants is established by the attitude of the citizens and candidates at the municipal elections.

There are but few cities in which there is not at least one candidate who stands squarely upon the municipal ownership platform, and who is making his fight on that issue. In this city nearly all of the candidates who hope for nominations or the primaries to-morrow came out for city lighting plants when questioned on the subject by the Municipal Ownership League through the referendum committee.

The names of the candidates for the Mayoralty, the Board of Aldermen and the Common Council, who favored the establishment of a city lighting plant were published in the BOSTON AMERICAN yesterday—also a very few who were not in favor of it and some of the candidates who did not reply to the query who were presumably opposed to it.

LEO F. McCULLOUGH.

One of the candidates for the Common Council who believes in the city owning its own lighting plants is Leo F. McCullough, a candidate for re-election in Ward 13. It was Mr. McCullough who introduced the resolution for a municipal gas plant in the Council this year.

"I am a candidate for renomination and re-election," he says, "and if I succeed I'll introduce the resolution again in the next body."

Stands on His Record.

Mr. McCullough will make a fight for the presidency of the Common Council. He has a record his friends believe will land him there.

This is what John F. Haughey, candidate for the Common Council in Ward 9, says:

"I will vote for the resolution on municipal ownership and get as many more as I can if I am elected."

Councilman William F. Howes of Ward 22 says:

"The City Council minutes for 1905 page 214 will show you that I voted in favor of the municipal lighting plant resolution when the order was presented.

"I am still of the opinion that the people of Boston ought to have a chance to vote upon the question."

Here are some of the other letters received from candidates—just a few of them:

Municipal Ownership League, Frank Parsons, Chairman, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir—Replying to your favor of the 9th inst. I beg to say that in the event of my nomination and election to the City Council I will do all that I possibly can to have the question which you have brought to my notice submitted to the people for their decision. Hoping that this may satisfactorily meet your requirements, I have the honor to remain, Respectfully yours,

JOSEPH L. ARCARDI.

Always Favored Civic Ownership.

Mr. Parsons:

Dear Sir—I received a note from you November 9, '05, asking me if I was elected to the Common Council would I vote for municipal lighting plant. I have always been in favor of municipal ownership, not only in regard to a lighting plant, but a number of other things within the city. If elected I promise I will support any bill that may be brought before the Council in regard to municipal ownership. As a union man myself I am in favor of any movement that may be started to benefit the workingman.

Respectfully,

JOHN E. CROOK,

144 Paul Gore street, Ex-Councilman, Ward 22.

Mr. Frank K. Parsons,

Dear Sir—I have always been an advocate of municipal ownership and shall continue to fight for it whether elected or not.

Respectfully yours,

JEREMIAH J. COFFEY.

Ward 24.

Will Vote for Lighting Plant.

Mr. Frank Parsons, Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sir—Your circular letter of the 9th at hand and contents of same carefully noted.

I will, if nominated and elected to the City Council, vote for the municipal lighting plant, also all other matters pertaining to the interests of the people.

I firmly believe in the matters you are undertaking and have no doubt that this great and important matter will be passed the coming year by the City Council and Board of Aldermen.

Believe me sincerely yours,

ARTHUR J. GARDNER,

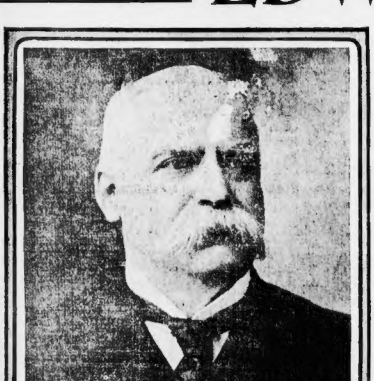
Ward 16. No. 315 Norfolk street.

Thomas J. Gilfilin, one of the Democratic candidates for aldermen in the first district, wrote to the secretary of the League:

"As I have declared to the Municipal Ownership Leagues, I will vote for a gas and electric light plant if elected to the Board of Aldermen next year and stand against corporations and for with the people at all times."

In Cambridge Frederick S. Deitrick is making a hustling campaign for the nomination for Mayor on the municipal ownership ticket. He served in the Legislature three terms and is a vote-getter, his friends declare. There are two other candidates in Cambridge.

The municipal ownership organizations in Cambridge are boosting Mr. Deitrick's campaign. The primaries are next Tuesday and his supporters say that he has a good chance to win the nomination. He has a record, they declare, that should nominate him.



EDWARD B. CALLENDER SAYS:

"When elected Mayor I will heartily co-operate with the District Attorney in turning the grafters out of City Hall and will do all in my power to secure to the taxpayers a judicious and economical expenditure of their money."

DRIVEN FROM THE FEAST

MORE CANDIDATES FALL IN LINE FOR MUNICIPAL PLANT

Some of the candidates for the nomination for the Board of Aldermen and the Common Council who had not been heard from when the list was printed in the BOSTON AMERICAN yesterday as to how they stood on the question of a municipal lighting plant for Boston, have replied affirmatively. Their names follow:

George F. Monahan, candidate for Alderman on the Democratic ticket in the Second District, which comprises Wards 2, 3 and 6.

B. A. Brickler, candidate for the Common Council in Ward 7.

James T. Hardy, candidate for the Common Council, Ward 18.

John L. Campbell, candidate for Alderman in Eighth District.

Redmond S. Fitzgerald, Democratic candidate for Council, Ward 20.

Charles W. H. Smith, Republican candidate for Council, Ward 4.

Michael J. Callahan, Democratic candidate for Council, Ward 16.

Isaac Klein, Democratic candidate for Council, Ward 9.

Abraham Goldstein, Republican candidate for Council, Ward 8.

Edward T. J. Noonan, Democratic candidate for Council, Ward 13.

Edward C. Webster, Republican candidate for Council, Ward 23.

John A. Hurgle, candidate for Council, Ward 22.

William Kohler, Democratic candidate for Council, Ward 19, and Thomas Nolan, Democratic candidate for Council, Ward 9, go on record in favor of municipal ownership.

Edward J. Bromberg, Republican candidate for Alderman in the Eleventh District, who was the only Republican in favor of the municipal ownership of lighting plants, but whose vote carried the resolution in Dec. whose vote carried the resolution in January, was erroneously reported yesterday as "not heard from." He is a stronger municipal ownership man to-day than ever. He was the only Republican in the Board who voted against the Dock Trust.

OWNERSHIP CLUB OF WARD 19 WILL SUPPORT DONOVAN

At the regular meeting of the Ward 19 Municipal Ownership Club it was unanimously decided to support the candidacy of Edward J. Donovan for Mayor. The club is composed of workingmen of the ward and every member is a voter.

After a discussion of the merits and platforms of the different candidates, the decision to support Mr. Donovan was arrived at.

In the Aldermanic and Council fight it was decided to support none but men who came out openly and squarely for municipal ownership. The club was addressed by its president, William F. Kerigan, Secretary and Treasurer Peter D. McQuaid and many other prominent men of the ward.

FOR DONOVAN AND CIVIC OWNERSHIP

The Ward 1 Donovan Club of East Boston held an enthusiastic meeting at their headquarters last night in Stirks Hall, Saratoga street. Many speakers addressed the meeting, among whom was Warren F. Webster, who spoke in behalf of municipal ownership. Mr. Webster briefly outlined the necessity of the city owning and controlling public utilities.

LUCE OUT; WILL BACK WALKER

In a letter to Mr. Walker he says that a "square deal from a prudent man" is all that any of the members of the next House asks, and states that he feels sure Mr. Walker can be depended upon to give a square deal.

How Our Plan of Selling Whiskey Saves the User Money

When you buy whiskey from a store you are obliged to pay three profits on the cost of production—the distiller's, the jobber's and the dealer's. This means that you pay $1.50 for a quart bottle of whiskey which would cost you but 75c. if you could buy from the distillers.

Our famous Callahan Home Whiskey is a mellow, 10-year-old whiskey of superior quality and flavor, that would cost you $1.50 a quart bottle at retail, and would be worth it. But we sell it direct to the user, cutting out the middlemen's profit, and give four full quarts for $3, which is at the rate of 75c. a quart, or one-half what you would have to pay at retail. But more than this: Knowing that we have the best whiskey at the lowest price, we ask you to try Callahan Home Whiskey at our expense.

Read this straightforward offer, free from all ifs and ands:

Simply send us $3 for four (4) full quarts of Callahan 10-year-old Home Whiskey, and we will promptly ship the goods to any railroad point in New England, express charges prepaid. Sample a bottle and if not thoroughly satisfied with your purchase return the case to us, at our expense, and your $3 will be returned without argument or delay.

We mean exactly what we state. The entire risk is ours. You have no expense if we do not please you.

REGISTERED REPUBLICAN VOTERS OF BOSTON

At the Primary to Be Held Thursday, November 16, 1905

VOTE FOR EDWARD B. CALLENDER FOR MAYOR

POLLS OPEN FROM 6 A. M. TO 4 P. M.

YOU VOTE IN THE SAME BOOTH AS ON ELECTION DAY

Senator Callender is not supported by any of the Republican politicians who in the past have been influential in dictating Republican nominations. His strength lies in the respect and confidence of the masses of the Republican party, who are disgusted with the situation of affairs existing at the present time at City Hall, and, alarmed at the mere thought that it might be possible under any circumstances that either of the two men contesting for the Democratic nomination could be elected Mayor of our great municipality, they turn in confidence to one whose course in public office has invariably been indorsed by his constituency and who has the friendship and confidence of the great leaders of the Republican party in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

We confidently expect to nominate Senator Callender by a large plurality. Some few days ago it became plainly apparent that Mr. Frothingham's candidacy was no longer to be seriously considered.

The question before the Republicans is: Do they want Senator E. B. Callender of Ward 24 or do they want Judge Henry S. Dewey of Ward 11? Do they want an administration which, while sound and conservative in the conduct of business affairs, will yet be uncompromisingly radical in dealing with the grafters at City Hall; or do they want an administration that will be sure to furnish strange and startling surprises from week to week and even from day to day?

Rubber Goods Less Than 1-2

Beginning Tomorrow of a Sale of Greatest Importance.

Special purchase and dispersal of a large quantity of high-grade rubber sundries and specialties from

Faultless Rubber Co., of Akron and Ashland, Ohio.

This is unquestionably the most noteworthy sale of Rubber Goods any store in Boston has ever announced, and we naturally anticipate an immense volume of business.

The goods have been in the store less than a week, and we've had a special force getting them ready for this sale.

We are able to quote the astonishingly low prices asked

Because the goods are technically classified as "seconds." Wearing qualities are positively unaffected, and we guarantee, and will make exchanges freely on all regular goods.

The "seconds" in this case are goods that bear slight blemishes; for instance a pair of rubber gloves may have a little discoloration at the seam, or the metal work of a water bottle may have a fleck or two of rust. No "hurts" at all, but they were sufficient to cause the Faultless Rubber Co. to push them into the category of "seconds."

FEDERATION TO STAND AGAINST CHILD LABOR

To Fight for State Amendments Giving Power to Regulate Hours of Labor.

MANY IMPORTANT ISSUES

By Frank K. Foster.

Special to the Boston American.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 15.—The report of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor brought into the fortnight many of the more important issues around which the deliberations of the convention will centre. Prominent among these are two jurisdiction issues which the council confessed its inability to adjust during the past year, viz.: that existing between the brewery organization of engineers and firemen, and that between the carpenters and woodworkers. The council recommended that strenuous measures be taken by the convention to enforce the Federation decrees in these cases. The report considers at length the question of Southern child labor and the co-operation with other societies besides those of labor for the reorganization of a national anti-child-labor sentiment.

The council referred in congratulatory terms to the passage of a constitutional amendment at the last New York State election which confers upon the Legislature of that State the power to enact statutes regulating the hours of labor under consideration of the congress were the State Federations of Labor all over the country are requested to take like action in their respective localities.

For Direct Legislation.

Great gains were reported in the movement for direct legislation in various States and cities, and the system of questioning candidates as to this issue was given credit for the progress made.

The report of the fraternal delegates to the British trades union congress at last year stated that that body represented 1,500,000 men, the Amalgamated Society of Engineers and the Durham Miners re-affiliating after several years' absence. The deliberations of the congress were more largely devoted to political questions than is the case with the American Federation. A noteworthy feature of the congress was the sending of a congratulatory cablegram to President Roosevelt for his efforts in bringing about peace between Russia and Japan.

Among the prospective candidates for delegates from the federation to Great Britain next year are Wilson, of the Pattern Makers; Warner, of the Machinists; Dempsey, of the Miners; Flapetsky, of the Barbers; Brien, of the Clerks, and Tidd, of the Woodworkers.

Changes in Council.

There are rumors of several changes in the personnel of the executive council, Mahone, of the Street Car men, being a candidate for a place, while the general Brotherhood of Carpenters, which has not been represented for several years, will also seek to elect one of their delegates. There is also opposition to Vice-President Spencer, of the Plumbers, who is now first vice-president.

The closing of the contest for the Boston unionists' nomination will release several delegates, who have not yet arrived, for their duties on the convention committees.

H. C. Frick, Carnegie's right bower in days gone by, and who narrowly escaped assassination by the anarchist, Berkman, some years ago, is one of the largest contributors to the fund being raised for the entertainment of the delegates.

The local printers hold a mass meeting next Monday evening in aid of the movement for the eight-hour day in the craft.

Invitations from places which desire the next convention have already been received from Niagara Falls, Minneapolis and Toronto. Sentiment appears to tend toward the selection of the latter place.

BOSTON TERRIER IS KING OF NEW ENGLAND DOGDOM

Big Show Opens in Mechanics Building To-day—Fine Exhibition.

To-day the Boston Terrier reigns supreme in the dog world so far as the Hub is concerned, for the little smooth haired beast is on parade at Mechanics Building and will be for the rest of the week.

It is the beginning of the annual specialty show of the Boston Terrier Club and under the roof of the big hall are assembled the finest bred specimens of the terrier race, to be judged as to their qualities in their different classes.

And as for society, every class of humanity admires the sleek little Boston terrier, who outshines every other dog as a pet of the household.

There are 450 of him at this bench show, which is the largest collection ever gotten together, and thousands of dollars will be represented in the finest bred dogflesh in the land.

Champions galore are in attendance, readily picked out by their superior qualities, proven by consistent judgement in the ring in different sections of the country, and they are here to add further laurels to their reputations.

And there is a large field which will prove the loftiest honors, as many breeders will bring out for the first time some youngsters who are said to have unusual quality.

This year for the first time the Boston Terrier Club has adopted the system of scoring method of judging the American dog, as at last Wednesday's meeting it was decided shall be called, as there will be a novice, a limit and a henry dog class provided for each class of dogs, which means that the different ribbons will be greater than ever.

The organization of the Boston Terrier Club was first thought of back in 1901. Two years afterward the first show was held, and it is to-day among the most the strongest specialty show in existance.

Frederick Baldwin, of Milton, Mass., was a prime mover in the organization of the club and has done well-known as breeders of the new type of dog that has become the rage of Boston, the hardest bred to raise and develop, these drawbacks probably being the cause of the increased desire for his kind.

Many Special Prizes.

Gradually year by year the shows have been brought up to a higher standard and it was left for the present season to produce the stellar display of the "Bostons."

The special prizes are in excess of the premiums given in past years and has proven an incentive for many breeders to come to the front in contests.

These much sought for rewards of merit were awarded with the idea of publicizing and increasing the interest and have had a stimulating effect.

The first thing the committee did was to secure the services of a competent judge who would rule without prejudice to owner or dog, and in F. F. Mahoney one has been found who fills the bill to everybody's satisfaction.

He has seen the terrier rise from obscurity to the height it now occupies in kenneldom, and his record in the ring is worthy of and exacts the highest estimation.

The largest individual exhibitor is Myron W. Robinson of New York City, who has made twenty-three entries, including the five champions: Little Jap, Sportsman, Lady Dainty, Selwonk Beauty and Carnation.

W. E. Stone of this city has one champion in his list, Champion Whisper, and is the largest local bench exhibitor.

Cornelius F. Sullivan, acting as agent, has some fifty nominations and he gets the $25 prize for obtaining the largest list. For himself he shows the greatest living mice of "Bostons," the famous Sullivan's Punch, and several others of almost equal fame.

From all over New England come the most prominent dogs and such a gathering prize stock never occured.

Leading Exhibitors.

Among the leading exhibitors at the show are:

RULERS OF THE WORLD.

Meat Eating Nations Are the Leaders in Every Branch of Human Achievements.

The ruling nations of the world are meat eaters and history records that they always have been.

Vegetarians and food cranks may explain this in any way they choose, but the facts remain that the Americans, English, French, Russians and Germans are meat-eating nations, and they are also the most energetic and most progressive.

The principal food of the heroic Boer soldier, known as Biltong, is a sort of dried beef, affording a great deal of nourishment in a highly concentrated form.

The weak races of people are the nibbling Chinese, Hindoos, and Siamese, regarded since the dawn of history as non-progressive, superstitious and inferior physically and mentally to the meat-eating nations who dominate them.

The structure of the teeth plainly indicates that human beings should subsist upon a variety of food, meat, fruit and grains, and it is unhygienic to confine one's diet to any one of those classes to the exclusion of another.

Meat is the most concentrated and most easily digested of foods, but our manner of living is often so unnatural that the digestive organs refuse to properly digest meat, eggs and similar nutritious and wholesome food, but it is not because such food is unwholesome, but the real reason is that the stomach lacks, from disease or weakness, some necessary digestive element; hence avidac indigestion and, later on, chronic dyspepsia.

Nervous people should eat plenty of meat, convalescents should make meat the principal food, hard-working people have to do so, and brain-workers and office men should eat, not so much meat, but at least once a day, and to insure its perfect digestion one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should be taken after each meal, because they supply the peptones, diastase and fruit acids, lacking in every case of stomach trouble.

Nervous dyspepsia, catarrh of stomach, gastritis, sour stomach, gas and acidity are only different names for indigestion, the failure to digest wholesome food, and the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after them all because, by affording perfect digestion, the stomach has a chance to rest and recover its natural tone and vigor.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the real household medicine; it is as safe and pleasant for the stomach ache of the baby as it is for the imperfect digestion of its grand sire.

They are not a cathartic, but a digestive, and no pill habit can ever follow their use; the only habit Stuart's Tablets induce is the habit of good digestion and consequently good health.

J. H. HYDE SAYS GOULD TRIED TO BUY HIS STOCK

Frick, Harriman and Others Also Made Offers For His Equitable Holding.

HE DECLINED ALL BIDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—James Hazen Hyde, former vice president of the Equitable Society, who is now engaged in investigating committee of the ways and doings of financiers and politicians gave Wall street a start and set the political world a talking, was on the stand again to-day, and his testimony added a new chapter to the already long history of so-called frenzied finance.

Mr. Hyde said that he had received several offers for his holdings of stock in the Equitable last Winter. The first offer came from Mr. Gould and the second came from Henry C. Frick and Mr. Harriman, who offered Mr. Hyde $5,000,000 for all his stock, or $2,500,000 for half. Hyde said he declined the offer as he did not think it for the best interests of the society.

"I offered to transfer the stock for five years," said Mr. Hyde, "at the beginning of the transfer, but there were legal difficulties in the way. Mr. Turbell made an offer of $1,000,000 for my stock. He said that a syndicate stood ready to furnish this sum. Mr. Young made an offer of $1,000,000 for my stock."

Mr. Hughes then spread on the record the act incorporating the Fireproof Warehouse Company, whose charter was taken over by the Mercantile Trust Company. The inquisitor also read into the record bills introduced into the State assembly and Senate in March, 1904, repealing the charter of the Fireproof Warehouse Company. These are the alleged retaliatory bills introduced to force a purpose to ascertain New York politicians, who had not suffered some loss in the collapse of the shipbuilding trust.

Mr. Hyde said that he wished to make a statement concerning the shipbuilding matters. I had no business in the company in any way, shape or form, nor the Equitable society."

MALDEN, 10; QUINCY, 0.

After a hotly contested battle on the gridiron at Malden yesterday afternoon, Malden was unable to score against Quincy High and the game ended 0 to 0.

FIREMEN AND POLICE RESCUE 11 AT NIGHT FIRE

Suspicions of Chelsea Chief Aroused—He Will Ask an Investigation.

SMOKE CHOKED HALLWAYS

Fire Chief Spencer of Chelsea is to ask for an investigation by the State fire marshal, after a suspicious fire at No. 108 Everett avenue, Chelsea, in which eleven persons were with great difficulty saved from the flames by firemen and policemen.

The rescued ones are: Mrs. Mollie Cohen, her five children, Etta, ten; Dora, seven; Ida, five; Sarah, two and one-half; and Herbert, six months; Mrs. Minnie Zledman, her three children, Jacob, six; Dora, three; and Etta, two; and an Armenian boarding with Mrs. Cohen, whose name the police were unable to secure. Mrs. Cohen, her five children and the Armenian were removed to the hospital.

Driven Back by Smoke.

The Cohen family occupy the rooms on the third floor of the house and the Zledmans the fourth floor. Mrs. Zledman and her children were in bed at the time the fire was discovered and were made aware of their danger by the shouts and cries from the Cohen family.

All tried to make their escape down the stairs, but volumes of smoke came pouring up toward them and drove them back to their rooms.

Running to the windows they shouted for help and Mrs. Cohen, as a spectator says, threatened to jump to the street, a distance of forty feet. Mrs. Cohen's child was then introduced into the conversation and when told that one of them was dying under a bed, where it believed they ran to hide in their fright.

Started in Tinshop.

The fire started on the first floor in the tinshop of Hyman Goldsmith & Co. The rooms occupied by this concern were previously used for tenement purposes. The damage to the building and contents is about $2,000.

BOYCOTT ON AGAINST B. & N. IN MELROSE

Women Refuse to Ride In Cars Because of Increase In Fare to Boston.

MAY BE A NEW RAILROAD

The boycott of the Boston & Northern Railroad by the Melrose people because of increased fares has become a serious proposition for the railroad. The public is following the advice of the Melrose Aldermen and even the dead trains, or walk whenever it is possible.

It is now proposed to grant a franchise to a new concern, backed by New York capitalists, to build an air line from Boston to Melrose, to be run partly over private property and partly through some of the principal streets of the city, giving the people of Melrose, Melrose Highlands and Wyoming easy access to Boston.

Capitalists have communicated with Alderman Oliver H. Monroe regarding the plan, and when it was briefly outlined to members of the Board of Aldermen, it met with unanimous favor. The proposed company is already in litigation with the Boston & Northern road in the Supreme Court of Massachusetts.

It is understood that the Railroad Commissioners are favorable to the new company, but the matter of having them build a direct line to Boston, with a five-cent fare from all points in Melrose, will probably be seriously considered at the next meeting of the aldermen.

Hundreds of signatures have been obtained to the petitions asking for another hearing before the Railroad Commissioners, and which will be presented to every citizen in Melrose for his signature as soon as possible. Many of the petitions have been placed in the principal stores and the names are being added to them rapidly.

WARRANT OUT FOR ARREST OF T. W. LAWSON

Clarence W. Barron, of News Bureau, Accuses Financier of Criminal Libel.

COUNTER WARRANT ASKED

Thomas W. Lawson, Boston's famous stockbroker, horseman, yachtsman, dog fancier, trust buster, author and many more distinguished things will appear in the Municipal Court Saturday morning to answer a charge of criminal libel brought against him by Clarence W. Barron, proprietor of the Boston News Bureau, a State street news sheet.

A warrant for Mr. Lawson's arrest was issued by Judge Wentworth, after Sherman Whipple, counsel for Mr. Barron, had presented his client's charges, and Mr. Lawson's counsel had appeared in his employer's behalf.

The charge is based on printing in the October number of Everybody's Magazine, accredited to the pen of Mr. Lawson. Mr. Barron also alleged that at various times within the last few years he has been attacked in circulars, the newspapers and personally by Mr. Lawson.

Lawson to Ask for Warrant.

Arrangements have been made by which Mr. Lawson will be brought into the Municipal Court Saturday morning to answer the charge. A hearing will be waived and the case presented as soon as possible to the Superior Court.

Mr. Lawson's counsel are arranging to apply for a warrant for the arrest of Mr. Barron on a charge of criminal libel, as soon as the case against Mr. Lawson is removed from the Municipal Court jurisdiction. Mr. Barron says the warrant to be asked for by Mr. Lawson will be based on statements by Barron relative to Mr. Lawson's stock operations last December, when certain stocks floundered mysteriously in the stock market, Amalgamated principally.

BOY BURNED TO DEATH IN HUT

Unable to Escape From Play House, Dorchester Lad Dies In Flames.

Stanley M. Marsters, twelve years old, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Albert R. Marsters of No. 6 Russell park, Dorchester, was burned to death by the explosion of an oil stove in a small shanty in a vacant lot of Corona street, a short distance from his home, after a heroic effort had been made to save him by a chum, Alexander G. Stein of No. 7 Orchardale street, who was himself badly burned.

The youngster, in company with playmates about his own age, was enjoying the comforts of the hovel for the first time, when one of the boys stepped upon a loose board in the floor and overturned the heater. All except Marsters managed to make a hasty exit, but the unfortunate boy, handicapped by a lame leg sustained by being run into by fire apparatus two weeks ago, became panic-stricken and made no apparent attempt to gain his safety through the only opening, a doorway large enough to crawl through.

Stein and Arthur Phelps were occupants of another "clubhouse," a short distance away, and they, hearing the cries of their friend concerning the predicament of Marsters, were quickly on the scene, and although Stein who is fourteen years old, made a valient attempt to save the burning boy, he was forced away by the great heat. The house was built by the boys, and was composed mostly of box and packing case wood, and the exterior was covered with tar paper.

"DICK" CROKER A GOLF FIEND

Former Tammany Chief Has But One Aim, to Beat Carnegie's Record.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Mrs. W. T. Jenkins, sister of Richard Croker and wife of a former health officer of this port, returned from Wantage on the steamship Kronprinz Wilhelm.

She imparted the somewhat startling information that her brother was a golf enthusiast. "Brother Richard," she said, "is making a strenuous attempt to beat Mr. Carnegie's golf record. He rarely finds time to do anything but test his skill on the links. He is in the best of spirits, and he is not in politics and will never be again."

DOUGLAS ASKS PRESIDENT TO REMOVE DUTY

RETURN TO M'KINLEY RATE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—A delegation of the leading shoe, hide and leather manufacturers of the country, headed by Governor William L. Douglas of Massachusetts, waited on the President to-day to ask that he urge Congress to remove the duty on hides and to reduce the duty on sole leather from twenty to ten per cent., making it the same as it was under the McKinley law.

The delegation held protracted sessions last night and this morning at the New Willard Hotel, at which there was considerable discussion as to the precise nature of the request they would make of the President. At 10:30 o'clock they adjourned to go to the White House, after having agreed upon the proposition. The meeting of the delegation were held behind closed doors, Governor Douglas presiding.

Special to the Boston American.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Fire early this morning destroyed one of two temporary wooden structures erected on the site on North Pearl street where the John G. Myers estate department store collapsed last August, killing thirteen people. The dry-goods business of this, the city's biggest store, was being carried on in the two temporary structures, pending the erection of a big modern building. All the city's fire fighting force labored for hours to save the adjoining buildings.

The loss is estimated at $150,000.

NEWS OF LABOR.

In an addres before the label committee of Cigarmakers' Union No. 97, last night, Secretary Henry Abrahams called attention to the fact that it was just twenty-five years since the first trade label—that of the cigarmakers—was introduced in this country.

"Scores of labor organizations now have trade labels," he said. "The rise of the trades union movement dates from the introduction of the cigarmakers' blue label. The union label marks the difference between the trade organizations of Europe and the United States.

"This force, the trade label, together with the chain of benefits granted by the unions—the latter holding the membership and the former the employer through the consumer, both working in harmony—has produced the present high standard of living."

the other day that she had "known The Delineator for years." What she really meant was that The Delineator was just what she had not known—not for years; and there must be thousands of women in the city thinking The Delineator is as it was in their mothers' day.
"Do you take it regularly?"
"No, not now."
"Have you seen it last year, or the year before last, or within the past five years?"
No, she didn't think she had.
And yet—"she had known The Delineator for years."
It was so different last year from what it had ever been before that no printed comparison can do the change justice. It has been so much better and bigger this year than last year that all previous improvements are as nothing. For the year to come it will be a new and greater Delineator throughout. Everything is new in it excepting its good old name.

POLICE SMASH DOORS IN RAIDS ON DENS

VISIT EIGHT SUSPECTED PLACES BUT FIND DOCTORS HAVE FLED.

That the "doctors" conducting the "medical" offices against which the police have declared war are thoroughly frightened was evident when Captain Cain, of the Lagrange street station, with a squad of policemen, raided eight more places that are suspected as being of the same type as the Mrs. "Dr." Bishop place, where Susan Geary received the treatment that resulted in her death. Most of the places were vacant, the occupants having disappeared. In many cases leaving their medicines and instruments.

The places raided were as follows:

No. 153 Tremont street, Dr. Rodney.
No. 144 Tremont street, Dr. Charles F. Perry.
No. 220 Tremont street, Dr. J. Wales Brown.
No. 232A Tremont street, Mrs. Dr. Brown.
No. 253 Tremont street, old Dr. Jackson.
No. 237 Tremont street, Mrs. Dr. Allen.
No. 271 Tremont street, Mrs. Dr. Johnson.
No. 9A Park square, Mrs. Dr. Alexander.

Police Are Satisfied.

Captain Cain was assisted in making the raids by Sergeants Bowley and Kennedy, Special Officer Linton and sixteen patrolmen. They were accompanied by Dr. H. F. Williams, the police physician of the district. Dr. Williams said that practically everything found at the eight places in the way of medical equipment was such as might be used by reputable practitioners, but the police officials are gratified by the result of the crusade thus far.

THOMPSON IS QUINCY CHOICE

WHITNEY GAINS 523 IN RECOUNT

QUINCY, Nov. 15.—Mayor James Thompson is renominated by the Republicans by a vote of 1,865 against 736 polled in the caucus by Benjamin Dolbeare, his rival for the nomination. George H. Wilson entered the Democratic nomination, without opposition.

The returns from Ward 3 were not counted until 4 o'clock in the morning today and did not arrive at the city clerk's office till nearly 7 o'clock, the vote being unusually heavy. This is Mayor Thompson's home ward.

The recount of the votes for Lieutenant-Governor resulted in a net gain for Henry M. Whitney, Democrat, though they are not yet enough to the aggregate to visibly alarm his Republican opponent, Elmer A. Draper, who had a plurality of 1,966 on the press returns, or about 2,300 as figured at the registers of the Republican State Committee on reports received from city and town clerks.

The recount has been completed in twenty-three cities and ninety-two towns. The result is a gain of 523 votes for Whitney, including Boston.

BIG HITCH IN FITZ'S FIGHT

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—There is a hitch in the arrangements for the proposed Fitzsimmons-O'Brien fight, and the wrangle may develop into a war between the local promoters that may eventually close down the game here. The match is made, so far as Fitz is concerned, but the O'Brien end of it has not been satisfied, and unless Philadelphia Jack breaks faith with another local promoter Manager James Coffroth may be compelled to find some other opponent for Fitzsimmons.

Before O'Brien beat Al Kaufman here last month he gave his word to promoter Alex Greggains that if he won he would make his next ring appearance here under Greggains's auspices. In the meantime articles signed Fitzsimmons to meet the Quaker next month at his open air arena at Colma. Coffroth of late has been refused permits for Berkeley shows by Priest. It was Greggains's plan to match O'Brien against some good man at his club in December.

CRACK ROXBURY HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL TEAM.

BOWKER MAY BOX ATTELL

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—It is likely that Jem Bowker, the English bantam champion will visit this country in March next. Charlie Mitchell, the retired English boxer, who is in New York, said yesterday that he would sail for England in two weeks time for the purpose of attending to some personal business, and also to fetch Bowker and Jabez White here.

Bowker has been reported as coming to America several times, but failed to materialize. Mitchell brought White to this country and matched him to fight Jimmy Britt, who lost him in a twenty-five round bout. White is anxious to face Attell again, and he may get another chance. Then Bowker's arrival here right on probably will be matched with Abe Attell. The latter has agreed to box in England this month, but the contest fell through.

ANSWER TO QUERY.

E. Hewitt, Cambridge.—If you write to the Fowler Point Sheet you will probably get the information you desire.

HARRISON JOINS BILL REID'S SQUAD AT HARVARD AND MAY BE USED FULLBACK IN BIG GAME AS

The Harvard varsity eleven was given no scrimmage yesterday afternoon, the only work of the day consisting of running through signals. In this work the eleven lined up as against Penn, except that Pierce played left guard and Sumner right end. Lockwood was able to get into the work as his arm is still in poor condition from the wrench which he received in the Penn game.

"Buck" Harrison, who was substitute fullback on the Harvard eleven, and who is doing graduate work in Cambridge this year, joined the Crimson squad yesterday, and was played at fullback, alternating with Somers. Harrison is a heavy, strong man and will be a valuable addition to the squad.

SCHEDULE FOR HARVARD FIVE

The Harvard basketball schedule was announced last night as follows:

Jan. 6, Pennsylvania; Jan. 11, Cornell; Jan. 16, Boston College; Jan. 20, Princeton; Jan. 22, Tufts; Feb. 3, Holy Cross; Feb. 7, Yale; Feb. 18, Worcester Poly; Feb. 10, Princeton at Princeton; Feb. 17, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; Feb. 24, Columbia; Feb. 23, Technology; Feb. 26, Andover; March 3, Cornell at Ithica; March 9, Columbia at New York; March 10, Yale at New Haven.

All games not otherwise designated will be played at Cambridge.

CAPTAIN DANIELS

NONE of the local high school teams has made a better record this season on the gridiron than the Roxbury High School eleven, which has won nine out of the eleven games played.

Coach John O'Reilly has taken great pride in the fast aggregation of youngsters, and they have taken hold and followed out his instructions and made a strongly molded team.

The team is not a heavy one, but makes up for this deficiency in speed and fast moving formation plays, which accounts for its success.

Captain Daniels is one of the best rushers on the school field, and has filled the fullback position most acceptably.

The game of the year for the Roxbury lads comes on Thanksgiving Day, when the team faces the South Boston team, its biggest rival.

BOUT MAY BE ARRANGED AT NEW PENN CLUB BETWEEN NELSON AND M'GOVERN

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Billy Nolan, manager of Battling Nelson, the greatest lightweight pugilist in the world, arrived in New York yesterday, and last night met Joe Humphreys to discuss the terms of a meeting between the Dane and Terry McGovern.

"We are more than willing to make a match with Terry," said Nolan, "but the principal offer we have received is from the National Athletic Club in Philadelphia, and we are not prepared to consider that because the house is not large enough. We have not reached an agreement, but the only thing that stands in the way is a place to hold the battle.

"We are not worrying about a purse, and we won't insist on a guarantee, but we will hold out for a place large enough to hold the crowd. I do not wish to seem to be arbitrary in the matter, but no one can see that it is a plain business proposition. I know when a crowd that fight would draw, and there is no use holding it in a place where we will have to turn the people away."

Notwithstanding that no decision was reached last night, it appears certain that Terrible Terry will get the next fight with Nelson. And there is a strong probability that the scene of that interesting conflict will be the recently organized Tuxedo Athletic Club, in Delaware County, Pa., the promoters of which are Tom O'Rourke and Billy Roche.

"I like that idea first rate," said Nolan. "I understand that the boys can go twenty rounds there, and that is what the people want. A bout there would be pulled off, will be the envied men of their fleets for many a long watch.

All of the sailors in the two fleets will have had seventy-two hours' shore leave before the peace-preserving Ironclads steam out of New York Harbor. Friends of both Cockayne and Collins have been in it that they have used but few of their precious hours in order that the crews may find them well equipped. There is no longer any talk of a meeting between light and heavyweights of the fleets. Inter-ship fighting in the American navy is prohibited in favor of only one choice of representative men in those classes would cause hard feelings. There is not a ship in the squadron that does not boast a champion in every class, but there is only one to force been no chance to decide upon the comparative merits of the men.

The choice of Collins for the welterweight division is tacitly agreed upon every American crew in the river, as his fame has preceded him before. Every ship has entered, the fight then is about as much assured for Thursday as is fair weather.

GILMORE WON BY KNOCKOUT

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Fred Gilmore, who won the featherweight boxing championship of Canada last Spring in Toronto, was knocked out in the second round here by Ben Linstedt, in the preliminary round of the tournament being held by the Chicago Illinois Athletic Club. Linstedt broke his thumb during the fight, and may not be able to participate in the finals.

GREEN EXPECTS VICTORY OVER HARVARD TEAM

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 15.—The Dartmouth coaches were disappointed at being unable to hold a scrimmage, yet they thought this was better than having some of the players injured. The ground was frozen hard and the surface rough where it was plowed up by the players' cleats.

But this was just the condition desired for speed, and the signal practice was the fastest the team has shown for some time. The ends showed fine speed in their work of running down the field under punts.

With but few exceptions Trainer Bowler has got the men trained to just the right point, and if they can be kept there and do not grow stale, Harvard may well look forward to one of the hardest battles which has yet been fought within the stadium. The men are determined to better the nothing to nothing score of last year, and a repetition of their good work against Princeton should give them a good chance of turning the trick.

STRONG TEAM FROM SOUTH

A strong semi-professional ball team will make a trip through the North early next Summer, and desires to meet the best in New England. The team is composed of some well-known Southern college players, and has a fine record. Address Maurice Bellamy, St. Charles College, Ellicott City, Md.

FITZ NOT OLD FOR O'BRIEN, SAYS RYAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—"I am going to make a real champion of Marvin Hart," said Tommy Ryan, middleweight champion of America, who is now manager and chief adviser of the former Louisville plumber. "I understand he is a free and easy fighter. That will make the job much lighter. He is a big, willing fellow, and will do what he is told. That is the kind of men I like to handle. When I prepared Jim Jeffries for his first championship battle he always showed a willingness to follow out the plan of work I suggested, and the result was that we got along fine. What he learned from me everybody knows by this time.

Of course, Hart is not the equal of Jeffries in any way, but he has all the qualifications of the making of a champion. The fact that he went twenty rounds with Jack Johnson, one of the best colored heavyweights in the ring, indicates that there is some good material in him. I would have been better pleased to see Hart meet Tommy Simmons than O'Brien. Don't take any stock in the Corbettonian bring too old to fight. The public will find that he has one more good fight in him. He will be prepared to meet the winner. From what I hear O'Brien will have the call in the betting when they get together next December."

SAILOR CHAMPIONS OF TWO NAVIES READY TO FIGHT

BY TOM SHARKEY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Nothing could happen that would bring about a stronger feeling of fellowship between the lackies of the two squadrons than a bout between the two best boxers of the fleets. I was three years in the service myself and I am pretty close to all these men, and I know how they feel about it. Members of every ship in the American navy make the claim that I once belonged to that ship. I have met many of the lads since that two squadrons have been in port and they all want to see this fight.

I know the men are anxious to meet and I will gladly do everything in my power to help bring about a three-round bout. I am pleased to see Hart meet Simmons than O'Brien. Don't take any stock in the Corbettonian bring too old to fight. The public will find that he has one more good fight in him. He will be prepared to meet the winner. From what I hear O'Brien will have the call in the betting when they get together next December."

Both Anxious to Meet.

"Three rounds was all I used to need when I was in the navy," said the sailor seer of Fourteenth street last night.

Cockayne and Collins are both of them as anxious to meet as is the most enthusiastic of their followers to have them. Cockayne is convinced that his additional eleven pounds and his longer ring experience will overcome any advantage that the American style of fighting may give his younger opponent. Collins apparently does not entertain a doubt that the fight will redound to the glory of the Stars and Stripes.

He is a young man twenty-one years of age, but has a wealth of assurance which most fighters only secure after many successful ring battles. It is his ambition when his term of service expires with the fleet, in six months, to enter the professional ring and climb as high as he can.

"From what I have heard of Ross-English fighters," he said yesterday, "they are slow and take a position in the ring that makes them easy marks for a man with a punch. I haven't had a chance to fight on the ship yet, but have been pretty well tried out on it, and feel confident about a go with any of the Englishmen in my class.

"There'd be nothing to such a fight," said Sharkey last night. "The Englishmen are taught the clean breakaway and know nothing about the fearful punishment that can be inde' out in a clinch. Judging by what I have always my own strongest card, and my opponents generally asked for a clean break with me."

Official Permission Lacking.

In spite of the persistent rumors to the effect that the officers of the two fleets are simply pining away to see a go between the two best men of their respective squadrons, official permission for such a match is all that has been lacking up to date to assure it.

The simple refusal of the officer in charge of the Drake or the Kearsarge to allow Cockayne or Collins to leave the ship Thursday night will nip the interfleet battle in its present nebulous condition.

The flood of rumors that had already picked the sepirants of the friendly fleets, located the battle and all but decided it, worked the enlisted men on every ship in the fleets to an anticipatory frenzy. The fortunate few who witness the fight, if it

FREDDY PARENT SAYS FOOTBALL IS FINE SPORT

Freddy Parent, of the Boston Americans, is a great football fan. Last Saturday he was a prominent spectator at the Andover-Exeter game. "Have not missed one for five years," said Freddy, "and you bet I'll see that Yale-Harvard game." Parent journeyed all the way from Rumford, Me., to see the sport, but he likes it. He gets a lot of pointers in blocking off runners when he watches the second sack, which he covers, in taking the throw.

For five diamond gossip pertaining to its own team, Redtown takes the wrath. There have been more deals sprung in that town than anywhere on the circuit. Now they have Jimmy Collins, the boss of the Giants, will be traded for Jack Harper, and will manage that Harper is on the auction block.

That battle-scarred hero of the indicator, Timothy Hurst, whose pugnacious features have been an ornament to the diamond, has sold his farewell forever, but, like Sarah Herhardt, Timothy may still be in the game for the right kind of offers. Overtures are handed out and the Whiter is a bidder.

Joe Cantillon, ex-umpire and now manager of the Milwaukee team, has an easy time of bringing good gate after all the players. Fred Odwell, of the Cubs, was close to the bat one day, when Joe ceied out to his pitcher: "Offer a ball over the mark." Fred 'em over the plate. He couldn't hit it out of the infield." Odwell responded with a three-bagger, tying the score. Joe came out to third base, and, making a sweeping bow, in the most grandiloquent manner said, "I congratulate you, Mr. Odwell, and hereby apologize for my mistaken remarks of a few minutes ago."

WALSH MAY BE MATCHED WITH PALMER

Another international ring battle may take place in this country in the next few months. Jim Clarke has sailed for England to sign Pedlar Palmer to fight Jimmy Walsh, the crack Irish bantam.

The Washington Sporting Club of Philadelphia is after the bout, but it is likely the Douglas A. C. officials will also make a bid.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—A match between Jimmy Britt and "Kid" Herman is likely to be settled very soon. The Indianapolis Club has come out with a big offer for Britt and the club of Chicago also has a purse and weight question can be agreed upon the match will likely go through. Manager Nate Lewis of the local boy said that he would take the match at 120 to 130 pounds. The club is anxious for the bout to be held on the night of December 6.

The fight is to take place during the second week of December at Colma. The bout is to be for twenty-five rounds. Corbett is confidently telegraphed Harry Foley, asking him to wire an acceptance for Landers. Foley was quick to accept the offer, as the fight will draw a good crowd.

WHY SOME WOMEN NEVER WED

Men Do Not Allow Reason to Guide Them in Picking Out Their Wives

By Dorothy Dix

I HAVE received the following letter:

"I have read with great interest your article in regard to a 'Title Guarantee With Every Husband,' and I write to ask why it is that there are so many women who would make good wives who cannot get good husbands. Is it because men prefer butterflies for wives, whose main object seems to be to attend bargain sales and spend the hard-earned dollars of their husbands, or is it because good men are scarce? There are many women living in single blessedness who would much rather have a little home of their own, and would know how to take care of it and appreciate a good husband, too, if they could get one. I would appreciate it, if you would give this letter space in the AMERICAN, so that both the male and female readers could discuss the subject.

"A SPINSTER OF 30."

The reason why man passes over the woman who is cut out and foreordained and predestined by nature and providence to make a good wife and plays on the girl with no single qualification for being a helpmate to him, is one of the Dundreary things of life "that no feller can find out," but that he does it no one will deny and the divorce courts abundantly prove.

* * *

A MAN does not know why he falls in love with one particular woman rather than another, and he never, never will know.

And neither will any woman.

That men are not guided in choosing a wife by reason, appropriateness, common sense, good judgment, or any of the other evidences of sanity that they display in deciding the other problems of life, is daily illustrated by the unsuitable matches that we see all about us.

The widower with six small children that need a mother's wise counsel and care, does not select the woman of mature age next door, who shows that she has the Madonna nature by the very way in which she mothers the stray cats that come her way.

On the contrary he deliberately selects the silly girl who spends her time in giggling, drives the boys to drink, and the girls into running off with the first man who asks them, and makes his home a perfect inferno.

The poor young man who has his way to make in the world should marry a capable, economical, thrifty girl, who would help him make his fortune, but the attractive and fashionable young woman who keeps his nose to the grindstone and him sitting on a clerk's stool to the longest day he lives.

Old men who have reached the slippers and quiet-evening-at-home stage don't marry women who have no sympathy and age when they are glad to rest their bones instead of exerting them in a dance. They pick out young creatures who are still mad for gayety and excitement, and amusement in every form.

* * *

AND so it goes, and men continue to bowl that marriage is a failure while the world is full of women who would make good wives, and who never get a chance to fill the destiny for which they were created.

The reason for this may be found, I think, in the inconsistency of man, in the fact that a man believes he is going to be able to make his wife over into whatever shape he desires, and most of all in that the practical, sensible woman generally lacks the three qualities that most appeal to the masculine fancy.

Man's inconsistency is shown in somewhat he most commends in woman he seldom marries her for. Every man in the world sings praise in the highest of domesticity and economy. Yet it is not the girl who has made rents in her fingers doing the family cooking who gets her hand held, but the lily maiden who has kept her fingers soft and white and squeezable.

It is not the girl who dresses plainly and cheaply and saves the money that men are crazy to be seen out with, but the girl who has recklessly blown in every dollar in sight in swell raiment.

Hence the woman who illustrates these theories in her person, and who dresses plainly and devotes herself to domestic pursuits and preparing herself to make a good wife, gets left.

* * *

A STILL further cause of the sensible woman losing out in the fallacious belief that men are mercenary is that they can marry a serene ornament and have her turn into a drift planter the minute after the wedding ceremony is over.

Probably no man would marry a woman who knew she was going to be of no economy or domesticity if he had the slightest suspicion that she was going to continue to be a mere permanulating clothes rack on its way to the nastiness. He thinks as soon as a girl becomes a wife she turns right around and makes over all her old clothes and takes the dickens for economies, and before he finds out the difference he is married and the woman he ought to have had him and who would have made him the kind of wife he needed has lost her chance.

Worst of all, the good, sensible girl is generally shy on the three things that attract the average man. These are, first, prettiness; second, dependency, and third, flattery.

A good complexion will carry a woman further than anything else in this world, and it is a pity that the woman who relies on her virtues instead of her looks too often ignores. The old proverb that "Pretty is as pretty does" has no place in a man's creed. The woman who recognizes this and who creates the illusion of beauty where there is none by beautiful dressing and such other aids as heaven and her hairdresses bestow upon her is seldom an old maid.

The young man who has his way to make in the world will turn his back on the thrifty girl who would help him and wed the butterfly who will keep his nose to the grindstone as long as he lives.

* * *

IT is also because she cannot do the clinging vine act that many a woman never finds her cub.

It simply isn't in her to hang on a man as when she has got enough backbone to stand alone. She would feel like a fool looking into a man's eyes and asking him if it was really and truly true that the world was round and that he must have a great intellect to know so much. Yet there is no surer way to catch a man than by this simple device.

If a man once gets into the habit of taking care of a woman and playing ornament to her, he is lost.

The practical woman also seems to flatter.

To her literal mind it seems silly as well as unnecessary for a grey-headed man or widower a naughty boy, or tell a callow youth that he is a man of the world, or make a commonplace business man believe he is a perfect heart-smasher that could give a chinese mid point at the game and beat him out.

She cannot see, and she never sees, that men are like boys, and that they swarm about the woman whose tongue is honey put instead of a vinegar cruet.

Perhaps in this line all the law and the prophets, and it explains as nothing else does why so many women who are rich and good looking, and cut out to make good wives, are doomed to have "Spinster" carved on their tombstones.

"CONVICT 99"

The Story of an Irish-American, a Prisoner for Love, Persecuted in an English Prison

CHAPTER I.
Flight!

DOWN passing out from the office buildings, Ralph Vickers had taken no particular notice of a hansom cab that was waiting opposite the door. The cab was without an occupant, but the driver did not appear to be anxious to get a fare. It is even probable that had anyone halted him he would have declared himself engaged. He had been there about half an hour.

The heavy rain fell upon his shiny overalls, and dripped from the rim of his hat, but of this he appeared to be unconscious. He was absorbed in watching the door of the building in which the office of Christopher Lucas & Co. was situated, and looking with singular interest into the face of everyone who entered or came out.

When at last Ralph Vickers came down the long, wide staircase, and paused for a moment at the outer door to open his umbrella, the cabman made a slight forward movement, and his gaze sharpened into a yet keener scrutiny.

He turned his head, and with strained intentness watched the tithe figure of Vickers walking slowly down the wet pavement. Then he took up his reins and drove off briskly in the opposite direction.

About a couple of hours afterward the same hansom and driver returned, and a tall, stout, red-faced man got out of the vehicle and entered the building. As he went up the stairs he drew an official looking document from his inner pocket, glanced at a number, and knocked at a door. Then it was all right, and then went in at the office of Christopher Lucas & Co.

"Is Mr. Vickers in?" he asked of the office boy.

"No, sir. We're expecting him every minute, though," replied James Stiudo combe. James contemplated the stranger curiously, and came to the conclusion that he looked very much like a policeman in plain clothes.

"How long has he been out?" pursued the suspicious looking stranger.

"About half an hour. Will anyone, please?"

"No name at all. Did he say where he was going to?"

"No, I think as 'e were goin' to the bank, you must 'ave seen him in perticular? Will you wait?"

"No, I'll call again. What bank was it?"

The boy mentioned a bank in Lombard street.

Returning to the cab the detective—for such the stranger was—called to the driver, and they drove off. "Are you sure he didn't recognize you?"

"Sartin. Tain't likely that he'd know a cove like me arter two years. I ain't such a 'uncommon 'andsome chap as 'im. But I know 'im again, yer may lay to that. Where to next?"

"Stop at the corner of Lombard street."

A few minutes' conversation with one of the tellers in the bank elicited the information that Mr. Ralph Vickers had been in the country nearly two months, and that he had withdrawn from the bank £1,000, the credit to the sum of three thousand pounds.

"Can you oblige me with the numbers of the banknotes?" asked the detective. "I am from Scotland Yard, and I have reason to believe that this man intends to abscond. I have a warrant for his apprehension."

On receiving a list of the numbers, the detective went out hurriedly, and drove to Vickers' lodgings. Vickers was not there. At his club, and again at Mr. Lucas's office, inquiries were made; but it was evident that the gentleman inquired for had left very hurriedly, and had fled.

Vickers's flight lent weight to the belief that he was guilty of the terrible charge preferred against him, and the police day by day run its course the police had dispatched information all over the country, giving a description of the fugitive, together with the numbers of the banknotes in his possession.

For three days nothing was heard concerning him, but on the fourth day a message was received intimating that a man answering to the description of Vickers had crossed over to Belfast. This was followed by another telegram stating that the two ten-pound notes bearing numbers corresponding with those communicated to the London police had been passed into a Belfast bank.

Ralph Vickers was in Ireland. On the wings of the flight he had taken the express from Euston, and after a couple of hours' sleeping himself that he was not tracked, he crossed over to Belfast and at once continued his journey south to Queenstown. He had avoided the more direct route to Holyhead, as he had avoided Liverpool, having very well found it was more suspected that he intended to cross the Atlantic. The police would naturally watch for him at the stations on the direct line.

He arrived at Queenstown, as he had intended to do, within two hours of the time the Teutonic was advertised to leave for New York.

As he entered the steamship office to take out his passage a well, red-faced gentleman of official aspect hurried in before him, and presented the booking counter at the same moment.

A Coincidence

"Can I book for a berth in the first class to-day?"

"There is only one berth vacant," said the booking clerk. "Which of you is the gentleman," cried Vickers, authoritatively.

"I beg your pardon, sir. I entered the office in advance of you," protested the other, hotly. "I am first, and I mean to have the preference; I am not going second cabin if I can help it."

"There are no second berths left," put in the clerk. "This is the only vacant place in the whole steamer."

Vickers turned with angry impatience. For him, everything might depend upon the securing of this chance.

"Well, I'll toss up with you to see who shall have it," he said sharply. "I have an appointment in New York in seven days' time, and I wouldn't miss it for anything—come, head or tail?" And he threw up a sovereign.

But the stranger objected.

"No," he said, "I'll tell you what I'll do. You have a banknote in your hand. I have one in mine. Now let us compare our numbers, and the man whose bears the largest figures shall have the berth. That's fair, isn't it?"

"Quite fair," Vickers agreed, and he spread out his note on the mahogany. His opponent did the same.

"Confound it!" exclaimed the latter, "you have it. But that's curious, eh? Look! There's only one figure different."

Vickers drew back astonished. He recognized the figures as being one of those which he had recently changed in Belfast. Overcoming his discomfiture, he turned to the clerk and booked the vacant berth. He gave his assumed name, and received his coupon. When he looked around the strange gentleman was gone.

In another hour Vickers was aboard the great steamer. The second bell had rung. The mail bags were on board, and the tender was preparing to leave. In another few minutes the engines would be set in motion and Vickers dollars a year will vanish like smoke before the debutante's demands.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

She Discusses the Ever-Interesting Problem: At What Age Is It Best for a Girl to Marry?

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

NO more useless discussion ever took place than that which undertakes to decide the age to marry.

As well try to decide the proper age to die.

We are all in various stages of evolution.

By evolution I do not mean ascending from the ape.

I mean we are making the effort at self-completion, which is the purpose of all life on earth, and some of us are very old souls, and some of us are still very crude and uninformed beings; some of us are born wise, with clear-seeing vision, because we finished our follies (or the worst of them) in other lives, and some of us are just beginning to experiment in folly here.

So it is useless to set an age when each one of us should do certain things, because no two of us are in the same mental or physical or spiritual state at the same time.

There are girls who at sixteen have developed the womanly and maternal instincts which make them sensible and happy wives until they are sensible and happy grandmothers.

There are others who need to wait until they are thirty-five or forty before they will be prepared to settle into contented matrons and drop the frivolities of earth.

There are men who are born to be devoted husbands and fathers and who find no happiness in any other realm.

They are safe to marry at twenty, and once married means always married for them.

Other men—the majority perhaps—are safer to wait until the follies and adventures of life cease to seem attractive and until home has more allurements than the world's mantrom.

There are old matrons of twenty, and old coquettes of forty, and old men of twenty, and old fops of sixty.

The old fop and the old flirt ought never to have married, for they have not developed the qualities necessary to insure happiness.

Nor have they attained to the dignity and unselfishness demanded by the high calling of parentage.

Few American women are fully prepared to be mothers before they are twenty-five. Young girls may produce robust children, but the mental calibre of children born of more mature mothers is greater.

Not until we have our departments of parenthood in all the colleges for both sexes will we be able to bring the breeding of human beings to its highest standard.

Men and women need to learn how to care for the body, the mind and the spirit, and how to bring all three into harmony, before they can develop the race to the perfection possible.

By and by our educators will realize how much ca nbe done for the world by beginning to teach a child a generation before it is born, and to give it a pregraduate course during its prenatal months.

And then the finishing process will come after it is born. When all these things have been learned it will then be time to discuss the most successful age for choosing a life partner.

At present it is one of the subjects of least importance to the world.

Does a Society Bud Need $4,000 a Year?

BROOKLYN young woman of the eighteen years of age, who is to make her social debut this winter, has recently appealed to the courts to increase her allowance from $3,000 to $4,000 a year.

The former sum, she declares, is entirely incompatible with the demands of an up-to-date debutante, and the extra $1,000 is absolutely necessary to enable her to keep up the position to which she is entitled.

When one realizes the hundreds of thousands of families in this country to whom $3,000 per annum would be a princely sum, and who consider themselves fortunate if they have as much as a third as much to pay house rent, buy food, clothing, all necessities and educate several children, it seems an absurdly generous sum to take care of an eighteen-year-old girl, making her first social bow.

Yet thousands of young debutantes will have much more than $3,000 or even $4,000 expended upon them this coming year.

And a man in one girl in Boston would find $3,000 an inadequate sum to meet the requirements of her first year in society.

The young woman of to-day who is launched upon the sea through the social sea is a very important and accomplished personage.

For years ever since the days when she toddled off to kindergarten in charge of a solicitous nurse maid, her training has been along the lines that would make her a success when the time for her debut arrived.

Her school life was planned carefully. There was no neglect of fundamental studies, but languages, music, art, all had important places in the curriculum, and travel, here and abroad, supplemented the school training.

The young woman of to-day must have a well-developed body as well as a clear brain.

She must have the advantages of gymnastic training, the health-giving, upbuilding aid of outdoor life; she must learn to tennis and golf, she must learn to ride and drive fearlessly and in perfect form, she must have the grace that only the dancing master can teach and she must be up to date and well informed to a marvelous degree.

All this has cost money and has made the use of money an absolute necessity. Almost nothing in life appeals to this young woman as a luxury.

To look back upon what others might deem luxuries as merely her rightful possessions.

When you have taken the multitudinous needs of an eighteen-year-old debutante and added the grand-sum total you can appreciate the Brooklyn maid's plea for the extra $1,000.

Four thousand dollars a year will vanish like smoke before the debutante's demands.

CHAPTER VII.
A New Danger

JACK had been through many perils, but never had he met with an experience so grewsome as this.

The attitude of the savages made their purpose seem all the more horrible.

They apparently had no animosity toward him.

Indeed, they were rather inclined to admire him, moving about him and examining him in a style that was frightfully suggestive of the fact that they were gloating over the prospect of having him for their next meal.

Meanwhile the preparations for his slaughter went on.

The chief caused two great piles of stones to be reared on either side of the fire.

The sapling was laid over these and the fire was piled high with driftwood that burned like tinder.

As soon as this burned out and became a bed of coals Jack knew that his hour had come.

Having none of the speech of the cannibals, he was unable to parley with them.

The gold that he offered them they looked upon with curiosity.

It was plain that they did not understand its value.

And when one of the blacks drew from a pouch he wore about his neck a collection of nuggets which must have been worth a thousand dollars or more Jack was sure of the futility of offering them any reward of that kind.

For it was clear that in the country from which they came were mines of gold which would startle the world were they ever discovered by a civilized people.

Jack thought grimly of the jokes he had heard about cannibals.

The humor of eating missionaries did not appeal to him now.

He saw this cannibal business was a stern and terrible reality, and that the hapless victim who fell into the hands of the savage creatures had little reason to be in sympathy with the gentlemen who make jokes about it.

But his mind was nevertheless busy with all the possible escapes.

The secret of Jack's success, indeed of his ability to live as long as he had, was the fact that he never gave up.

And so, setting aside the horror which had overcome him, he undertook the task of thinking quietly and concertedly of a way to escape.

He still had in his possession a small revolver.

To hope to do anything with it against such an overwhelming force of numbers seemed idle, but Jack knew that the natives were superstitious, and his only hope lay in persuading them that he was possessed of more than natural powers.

He therefore drew out the weapon very quietly, and taking aim before he was observed sent a bullet into the leg of the chief who was bending over the fire.

With a loud shriek of pain the latter sank in his tracks.

Jack instantly sprang up and waving his revolver made signs that some of the others were to approach the fallen man.

At first they did not understand him, but when two of the number had attempted to draw near to their leader and had been knocked over by well-directed shots for their pains they paused and held a consultation.

It was plain that they stood in some awe of Jack, but they were nevertheless enraged at his actions, and had not yet discovered by what method he had done what he did.

To them the revolver was only a shining bit of silver.

Horrible Thought.

They, of course, knew nothing of its power.

And presently, after they had held speech for a few minutes, they advanced toward Jack, waving their war clubs menacingly.

Meanwhile Jack had reloaded the empty chambers of his weapon, and now stood ready.

The first three men he shot down without compunction, for he knew that his life depended on it.

The others, now fully persuaded that he was a devil, broke and ran.

Jack attempted to head them off before they could reach their boat, but in vain.

Regardless of the shots he sent after them, they ran helter skelter for the boat, and climbing into it made off as fast as they could ply their paddles, leaving their chief wounded to take care of themselves.

And now Jack found himself facing a plight as terrible as that which he had just escaped.

The ship he had seen was now hull down on the horizon.

She had gone her way, and if she had seen the signal fire had feared to pay heed to it.

The islands in that latitude did not bear the best reputation, and only the boldest navigators were willing to take the chances among the reefs along the shores and in the man-eating natives that infested them.

Thus Jack was left alone, to starve or to —he shuddered at the thought.

But he did not propose his own life he must eat the men he had slain and kill the others that lay wounded before him.

Then he would make a raft and float out to sea.

Could he do that which seemed so horrible to his gentle nature?

Not now—but hunger was already beginning to gnaw within him.

Soon he would be driven out of his head by its demands, and would——

"Good heaven," he thought, "what have I been thinking of? Is Jack Harkaway to become a cannibal? Never. I'll kill myself now, lest hunger should drive me to this."

There seemed no other way.

Jack looked out to sea.

Neither a sail nor a cloud of smoke intervened between him and the meeting of sea and sky.

With a sob he placed the revolver to his temple.

In a moment all would be over.

TO THE YOUNG READERS OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN:

LORD CHESTERFIELD'S letters to his son contain much advice that applies as well to-day as it did then. He was endeavoring to instruct the young man so that he should be a gentleman and a credit to his family. Here is what he says about liars. "Nothing is more criminal, mean or ridiculous than lying. It is the production of either malice, cowardice or vanity, but it generally misses of its aim in every one of these views, for lies are always detected soon or later."

"The Thinking Machine,"

By

Jacques Futrelle.

Synopsis of Preceding Part

HUTCHINSON HATCH, reporter, is sent to investigate the story of a ghost in an old house on the South Shore. He inspects the house, a roomy structure of two stories, which has been standing for sixty or seventy years and has been unoccupied for five years. It is owned by Ernest Weston, a state street financier, who inherited it from his father.

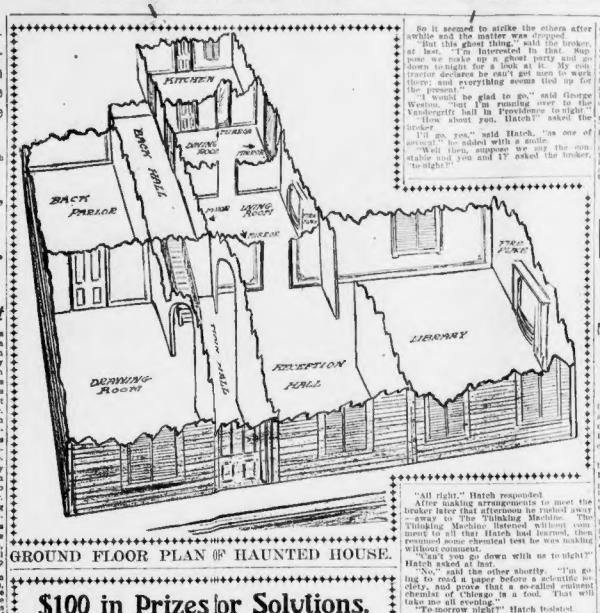
After an inspection of the house, Hatch makes some inquiries and finds that several workmen, sent there to make repairs and alterations in view of Weston's prospective marriage to Miss Katherine Everard, daughter of a banker, remained only one night, when they saw an apparition and left next day. This is described to Hatch as a flaming figure with a dagger.

That night, with the purpose of writing a Sunday story, Hatch goes into the deserted house to see the ghost. He arrives there at 9 o'clock, about 1 o'clock he leaves, running, with terror-stricken face, and sits in his room at the village hotel all the remainder of the night, with his lamp lighted.

With the problem thus presented to him Hatch goes to see Professor Van Dusen, so called The Thinking Machine, whom he knows well and puts the matter before him. To The Thinking Machine he admits that he has been frightened, senselessly, of course, but frightened. This fright was due to the appearing before him of the Flaming Phantom, with upraised dagger, which writes in letters of white fire on the air.

The reporter also tells how, despite his fright, he rushed at the PHANTOM, and it disappeared before his eyes, faded away. He found himself muddying in another room, having run there in his rush, and in terror smashed a window and went out that way. The Thinking Machine asks many questions, among them whether or not Hatch smelled anything when the phantom appeared, also the condition of several mirrors which Hatch reports having seen in the house set in the walls.

That night—the Flaming Phantom pays new tricks. The town constable, with several other men, see that PHANTOM in front of the house and go toward it. The constable threatens to shoot, and the men around him, himself even, feel something warm spatter over them. It is blood. They flee in terror.



GROUND FLOOR PLAN OF HAUNTED HOUSE.

PART 3.

HUTCHINSON HATCH found Ernest Weston, the State street financier, at luncheon with another gentleman in a cosy little place off State street at 1 o'clock that day. This other gentleman was introduced to Hatch as George Weston, a cousin. Hatch instantly remembered George Weston for certain eccentric episodes at Newport a season or two before, and also as one of the heirs of the original Weston estate who had squandered a fortune in a few years.

Hatch then thought he remembered that at the time Miss Katherine Everard had been so prominent socially at Newport George Weston was her most ardent suitor. It was rumored that there would have been an engagement between them but her father objected to the record of the young man. Hatch looked at him curiously his face was clearly a dissipated one, yet there was about him the unmistakable polish and gentility of the well bred man of society.

Hatch knew Ernest Weston as Weston knew Hatch; they had met frequently in the days when Hatch had been a newspaper reporter, and Weston had been courteous to him always. The reporter was in doubt as to whether to bring up the subject on which he had sought out Ernest Weston, but the broker brought it up himself, smilingly.

"Well, what is it this time?" he asked, genially. "The ghost down on the South Shore, or my forthcoming marriage?"

"Both," replied Hatch.

Weston talked freely of his engagement to Miss Everard, which he said was to have been announced in another week at which time she was due to return to America from Europe. The marriage was to come three or four months later, the exact date had not been set.

"And I suppose the country place on the South Shore was being got in order as a Summer place?" the reporter asked.

"Yes," said the broker. "I had intended to make some repairs and changes there, and furnish it, but now I understand that a ghost has taken a hand in the matter and has delayed it.

Have you heard much about this ghost story?" he asked, and there was a slight smile on his face.

"I have seen the ghost," said Hatch, feeling keenly the absurdity of it.

"You have," demanded the broker eagerly.

George Weston echoed the words and leaned forward in his chair with a new interest in his eyes, to listen. Hatch told them what had happened in the haunted house—all of it except, perhaps, he glossed over certain things which would only have reflected on his courage and he might have found it difficult to explain to anyone.

The men listened with the keenest interest, one as eager as the other.

"By George," exclaimed the broker, when he had finished. "How do you account for it?"

"I don't," said Hatch, flatly. "I can offer no possible solution. I am not a child to jog tricked by the ordinary illusion, nor am I of the temperament which imagines things, but I can offer no explanation of this."

"It must be a trick of some sort," said George Weston.

"I was positive of that," said Hatch, "but if it is a trick it is the cleverest I ever saw."

From that point the conversation drifted on to the old story of missing jewels and of some tragedy in the old house 30 years before. Now Hatch was asking questions by direction of The Thinking Machine; he himself hardly saw their purport, but he asked them.

"Well, the full story of that affair, the tragedy there would open no one's closet in our family which is nothing to be ashamed of, of course," said the broker, frankly, "still it is something we have not paid much attention to for many years. Perhaps George here knows it better than I do. His mother, then a bride, heard the entire story from the lips of my grandmother."

Ernest Weston and Hatch looked inquiringly at George Weston, who lighted a fresh cigarette and leaned over the table toward them. He was an excellent talker.

"I've heard my mother tell of it, but it was a long time ago," he began. "It seems, though, as I remember it, that my great grandfather, who built the old house on the South Shore, was a very wealthy man, as fortunes went in those days, worth probably a million dollars. Now, of course, that is nothing.

"A part of this fortune, say about $100,000, was in jewels, which had come with the family from England. Many of those pieces would be of far greater value now than they were then, because of their antiquity. It was only on state occasions, I dare say, when these were worn, once, say, once a year, at some big reception.

"Between times the problem of keeping them safely was a difficult one, it appeared. Remember, this was fifty years ago, before the time of safety deposit vaults. My great-grandfather conceived the idea of hiding the jewels in the old place down on the South Shore, instead of keeping them in the house he then had in Boston. He took them and went there accordingly.

"At this time one was compelled to travel down the South Shore, before Cohasset anyway, by stage coach. My great-grandfather's family was then in the city, as it was Winter, so he made the trip alone. He planned to reach there at night so as not to attract attention himself, to hide the jewels about the house as I understand it, and leave that same night for Boston again by a relay of horses he had arranged. But what happened after he left the stage coach, below Cohasset, no one ever knew except by surmise."

The speaker paused a moment and relighted his cigarette. The others listened without a word.

"Next morning," George Weston went on, "my great-grandfather was found unconscious and badly injured on the veranda of the house. His skull had been fractured. In the house a man was found dead. No one knew who he was; no one within a radius of many miles of the place had ever seen him.

"This led to all sorts of surmises, the most reasonable of which, and the one which the family has always accepted, was that my great-grandfather had entered the house in the dark, had there met someone who was living there or stopping there that night as a shelter from the intense cold, that this man learned of the jewels, that he had tried to rob my ancestor and there was a fight.

"In this fight the stranger was killed inside the house, and my great-grandfather, injured, had tried to leave the house and call for aid. He collapsed on the veranda where he was found and also without ever having regained consciousness. That's all we know or can surmise reasonably about the matter."

"Were the jewels ever found?" asked the reporter.

"No," was the reply. "They were not on the dead man, nor were they in the possession of my great-grandfather.

"It is reasonable to suppose then, that there was a third man and that he got away with the jewels?" asked Ernest Weston.

"Perfectly reasonable, and for a long time this theory was accepted. I suppose it is now, but no doubt was ever in it by the fact that only two trails of footsteps led to the house and none out. There was a heavy snow on the ground. If none left out it was obviously impossible that anyone came out.

Again there was silence. Ernest Weston sipped his coffee slowly; Hatch sat silent and sifting.

"It would seem then from that," said Ernest Weston at last, "that the jewels were hidden before the tragedy, and have never been found."

George Weston smiled lightly.

"Often and often for twenty years the place was searched for those jewels, according to my mother's story," he said. "Every inch of the cellar was dug up; every pieside took and every stone was searched. Finally the entire matter passed out of the minds of those who knew of it, and I doubt if it has ever been referred to again until now."

"A search even now would be almost worth while, wouldn't it?" asked the broker.

George Weston laughed.

"It might be," he said, "but I have grave doubts of it. A thing that was searched for for twenty years would not be easily found I should think."

So it seemed to strike the others after awhile and the matter was dropped.

"But the ghost thing," said the broker, at last, "I'm interested in that. Suppose we make up a ghost party and go down to-night for a look at it. My confidential secretary he can't get men to work there; and everything seems tied up for the present."

"I would be glad to go," said George Weston, "but I'm running over to the Vanderpriff ball in Providence to-night."

"How about you, Hatch?" asked the broker.

"I'll go, yes," said Hatch, "as one of several." he added with a smile.

"Well then, suppose we say the combination and you and I?" asked the broker, "to-night?"

"All right," Hatch responded.

After making arrangements to meet the broker later that afternoon he rushed away to get the "Thinking Machine." The Thinking Machine listened without comment to all that Hatch had learned, then resumed some chemical test he was making without comment.

"Can't you go down with us to-night?" Hatch asked at last.

"No," said the other shortly. "I'm going to read a paper before a scientific society, and prove that a so-called eminent chemist of Chicago is a fool. That will take me all evening."

"To-morrow night?" Hatch pointed.

"No—the next night," was the reply. "This would be on Friday night just in time for the big feature which had been planned for Sunday. Hatch was compelled to rest content with this, but he foresaw then he would have it all—solution and everything. It never occurred to him that this problem, or, indeed, that any problem, was beyond the mental capacity of Professor Van Dusen.

Hatch and Ernest Weston took a night train to the South Shore that evening, and on their arrival in the village stirred up the town constable.

"Will you go with us?" was the question.

"Both of you going?" was the constable's question.

"Yes."

"I'll go," said the constable promptly. "Ghost?" and he laughed scornfully. "I'll have him in the lockup by morning."

"No shooting now," warned Weston, "remember, somebody might get shot somewhere, we understand that, but there is no crime that we know of. The worst is possibly trespassing."

"I'll get him all right," responded the constable, who still remembered the experience where blood-warm blood had been thrown in his face. "And I'm not so sure there isn't a crime."

That night about 10 the three men went into the dark, forbidding house and took their stations in the old drawing room. Hatch sat when he saw the THING—whatever it was. There they waited. The constable moved nervously from time to time, but neither he nor Hatch nor Weston paid any attention to him.

At last the—the THING appeared. There had been a preliminary sound as of something grating against the floor, then suddenly a flaming figure of white seemed to grow into being in the reception room. It was exactly as Hatch had described it to The Thinking Machine, with uplifted dagger, with no face but a head, and was apparently eight, even nine, feet tall.

Dazed, stupefied, the three men looked as the figure raised a hand, pointing toward them, and wrote a word in the air—positively in the air. The finger merely waved, and there floating before them were letters, flaming letters in the utter darkness. This time the word was: "Death."

Calmly, Hatch, fighting with a fear which again seized him, remembered that The Thinking Machine had asked him if the handwriting was that of a man or woman, now he tried to see. It was as if drawn on a blackboard, and there was a queer twist to the letter at the bottom. He sniffed to see if there was an odor of any sort. There was not.

Suddenly he felt some quick vigorous action from the constable behind him. There was a roar and a flash in his ear; he knew the constable had fired at the THING. Then came the cry and laugh—almost a laugh of derision—he had heard them before. For one instant the figure lingered and then before their eyes, faded again into utter blackness. Where it had been was nothing—nothing.

The constable's shot had had no effect.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, NOVEMBER 15, 1905.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP IS THE REAL CAMPAIGN ISSUE

The present contest between the people of Boston and the corporations which control public utilities is the most momentous campaign ever known in this city.

This fact all voters should remember in deciding for whom they will cast ballots either for nomination or election.

The issue is plain and paramount. It is Municipal Ownership!

Shall Boston shake off the avaricious grip of corporations which have robbed the public through excessive charges, and corrupted, by personal favors or bribe money, men who have made municipal and State laws?

In New York, in Philadelphia, in St. Louis, in Chicago, and every other municipality where there has been a rising by the people in behalf of good government and honest Legislatures, the people have had to fight corporations and their debauching influences.

This national fight IS NOW ON IN BOSTON.

Striving for the continuance of privileges which have enriched them at the expense of the people of Boston, the corporations, which have ruthlessly milked the city for many years are displaying unprecedented interest and activity in the primary campaign. The division of district leaders, the charges affecting the probity of candidates and the advertisements in the daily newspapers all testify to this.

The contest is not between any two, nor any four or five candidates.

The battle is between the people and the chartered companies.

It is between the people who pay excessive gas and electric lighting bills—and who have seen their streets turned over without price or privilege to a Transportation Trust—and the Combines which have made Watered Stocks a Gilt-Edged Security through extortion practiced upon the citizens of Boston.

The Boston Trusts care nothing about the identity nor party of the men elected to office.

They care only about controlling them.

Fearing that candidates will keep pledges, the Boston Trusts believe it will be safer, or cheaper, to ELECT a city government than to risk BRIBING the one which will be sworn into office on January 1st.

The public service corporations remember what happened at the State House this year, when, fought by the BOSTON AMERICAN, the Gas Trust failed to put through its great Capitalization Steal, and was glad to accept a Ninety-Cent Gas Rate.

They remember that the City Council of Boston passed a Municipal Ownership order which must be ratified by the succeeding Common Council and Board of Aldermen before it can be submitted to the people. They are taking a desperate hand in this political contest in order to elect a Mayor, a Board of Aldermen and a Common Council. They want city officials who can be relied upon by the Trusts to Betray the Interests of the People.

It is the duty of every voter who has the welfare of Boston and its inhabitants at heart, who wants to shake off the Shackles of Corporation Government, who wants Cheaper Gas and Electricity and Honesty at City Hall, to remember these FACTS.

It is the duty of every citizen to strive for the nomination and election of candidates who CANNOT BE COERCED OR BRIBED.

Not only is it of vital importance to nominate and elect a fearless and incorruptible Mayor, but also a Common Council and Board of Aldermen who cannot be clutched by the fingers of graft.

The city of Boston needs a City Council in 1906 which will ratify the vote for a Municipal Gas Plant in 1905.

Boston needs a Mayor who will sign and not veto a Municipal Gas Plant ordinance.

Put only the foes of graft in nomination!

Edward J. Donovan is committed irrevocably to Municipal Ownership and to the immediate establishment of a City-owned Lighting Plant.

The Corporation Grafters are his foes.

A vote for Donovan is a vote for Municipal Ownership and against the Corporation Grafters.

PUBLIC SERVICE GRAFTERS DON'T WANT DONOVAN

That They Are All Arrayed Against Him Is the Best Proof That He Will Keep His Pledge for Municipal Ownership.

Remember this, Boston Democrats, when you go to the primaries to-morrow:

A VOTE FOR EDWARD J. DONOVAN FOR MAYOR IS A VOTE FOR MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Mr. Donovan makes this as his first pledge: "I stand squarely for the Municipal Ownership of Public Utilities."

And this is his second pledge: "I am for the IMMEDIATE ESTABLISHMENT of a MUNICIPAL LIGHTING PLANT."

This is the greatest of Boston issues. The members of the Municipal Ownership League and thousands of other citizens have urged a decided stand on this question upon the candidates for the nomination. No other candidate has come out fairly and unequivocally in favor.

It will be well to remember, also, that Mr. Donovan is in a position to keep his pledge. His recent record indicates that he will make his promise good.

You remember the stand he took in the Dock Trust grab, when certain aldermen were endeavoring to make a gift of certain streets in East Boston to the Trust. You remember, when Mayor Collins showed up the vicious character of the scheme, and Alderman Linehan exposed the graft in it, that Mr. Donovan, in his position as City Clerk, was able to save the city many legal complications, at least, by his stout and steadfast refusal to assist the grafters in securing records to bolster themselves before the court.

Most of all, it will be well to remember, AS A GUARANTEE THAT MR. DONOVAN WILL KEEP HIS PROMISE that HE IS BEING OPPOSED IN HIS CANDIDACY BY ALL THE POWER OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE GRAFTERS, who realize that his advent as Mayor will put an end to their unholy plans TO EXPLOIT THE CITY OF BOSTON FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE CORPORATIONS.

Municipal Ownership is the most vital issue for Boston, to-day. EDWARD J. DONOVAN IS THE ONLY CANDIDATE SQUARELY OUT FOR MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Remember THAT, Boston Democrats, when you vote.

IN THE TOILS

The Gas Trust Will Not Buy City Councilmen

The Question of Municipal Ownership in Boston Is Not as Big a Joke Today as the Public Service Grafters Thought It Was Last January

The vote of the Boston City Council for a municipal lighting plant last Winter was regarded as a huge joke by a great many Boston people.

An EXPENSIVE joke, but a GOOD one, was the opinion of the Boston Gas Trust.

The majority by which the City Council decided to allow the people of Boston to vote as to whether they want Municipal Ownership or the tyranny of the Gas Trust was much greater than the necessary two-thirds in each branch. Still many thought it a joke.

"Wait until next year," they said. "Then things will be different."

You see, it is a very easy matter for the people of a Massachusetts city to decide in their minds that they would like to own their own lighting plant, but it is a much more difficult thing for them to DO it. This is because the Public Service Corporations, which exercise a benevolent supervision over so many legislative acts in Massachusetts, carefully saw to it that the Gas Trust could not be disturbed in its monopoly except after a number of long and arduous steps.

First, the City Council must vote that the people can decide the question for themselves at the polls.

Second, the City Council vote is not the usual MAJORITY vote, but TWO-THIRDS of each branch.

Third, when the City Council has voted that the people of the city are worthy to settle the question for themselves, the matter isn't ended, but MUST LAY OVER FOR A YEAR.

Fourth, another City Council, by the same two-thirds vote, must favor letting the matter go to the citizens.

Fifth, the Mayor must then approve the order.

Sixth, THEN the people can vote on what they want.

A failure of any one of these steps sets the whole question back to where it was before the chain was started.

You can see that the Public Service Corporations intrenched themselves very carefully and very thoroughly when they had this law passed.

There is always a chance that they can buy a third of a City Council.

Then, if they fail, the chance is just as good that they can buy the NEXT one, to say nothing of the Mayor.

So, last January, when the City Council voted in favor of a Municipal Lighting plant—it was while the BOSTON AMERICAN was making its successful fight for cheaper gas, at the State House, you will remember—there is reason to believe that the Gas Trust did not become unduly worried.

Many people said:

"Oh, what's the use. THEY WILL BUY ENOUGH ALDERMEN AND COUNCILMEN NEXT YEAR TO DEFEAT THE ORDER. We won't get any chance to vote on it."

INDICATIONS WERE THAT THE GAS TRUST THOUGHT ABOUT THE SAME.

But the people of Boston have a chance to-day to see to it that the Public Service Grafters are disappointed. The Municipal Ownership League, which has come into being since last January, has asked every candidate for both branches of the city government, and for Mayor, to state JUST WHERE HE STANDS.

Many have replied, following the example of Candidate Donovan, who comes out SQUARELY FOR MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

At the polls the citizens of Boston will have their opportunity to vote ONLY FOR THOSE WHO BELIEVE SUCH AN ISSUE SHOULD BE SUBMITTED TO THE PEOPLE.

And THEN, woe to the man who proves, by voting otherwise after his election, that he thinks more of PICKINGS than of PRINCIPLES.

The Gas Trust is beginning to realize that the vote for Municipal Ownership, last January, was NOT a joke.

Electric Lights Cost the Small Buyer Five Times As Much as the Big Man

By Prof. Frank Parsons

THE country has been roused from centre to circumference over the iniquities of railway discrimination, giving big shippers advantages over small men.

But do you know that the discrimination between large and small consumers of electric light right here in Boston is more intense than the discrimination in railway rates?

Big users under special contracts obtain large quantities of light at 2½ cents per kilowatt, with an average of 3½ to 4 cents on the whole amount they use, while small men pay as high as 20 cents per kilowatt.

Here is a discrimination of 400 to 500 per cent. against the small man.

In a railway case which the Interstate Commission considers one of the worst in recent years—the Santa Fe discrimination in favor of the Standard Oil Fuel and Iron Company of Colorado—the discrimination was only 35 per cent.

To sell millions of kilowatt hours at 2½ cents (which is below the cost of operation reported by the company), with a total rate of 3.75 or 3.85 cents on the whole amount used by the favored consumer (which rate is still below the average cost of operation and maintenance on the data reported by the company), leaving those who pay 10, 15 and 20 cents to bear the burdens of interest and other fixed charges, a part of which should be borne by the large consumers, is a greater discrimination than that recorded on the famous oil cases in Pennsylvania and Ohio, where the agreements have been denounced in the courts as infamous.

The motives of the Boston Edison are not so objectionable as those which lead to railway discriminations in many cases. So far as I know there is no reason to attribute our electric light discriminations to personal favoritism.

But whatever the purpose, is it in harmony with sound public policy for a public service corporation to sell to wealthy concerns at one-fifth or one-sixth the rate to small men, or even at one-third or one-half? Is it fair to give an additional advantage to those who least need it?

If anyone is to have specially low rates should it not be those who are least able to pay high rates?

The rich man pays the same fare on the street cars as the poor man. Gas is sold at the same price per thousand to all consumers of light.

Gas for fuel purposes is sold in some cities at a lower price than for light, but all who buy it for fuel will pay the same price.

So electricity for power may very properly be sold at lower rates than current for light, but is it just or in accord with the public good to sell current for the same purpose at lower rates to the big man than to the little one?

If you owned the electric works yourselves as public property would you allow the rates to be fixed on that plan?

If you think the small man should have as good rates as the big man, work for municipal ownership, and vote for men who will pass the order necessary to submit the question to the people.
